The Very Moment We Become National Socialists

Sepp892

This article was written by one of our Italian co-workers.

If I were to be asked today which was the exact moment I became a true National Socialist I would surely be baffled. The answer is that I could not really answer that question. Becoming a National Socialist across the 20th and 21st century is not something you usually do overnight. Simple as that. Or better put, complex as that.

Each and everyone of us White men born in the second part of the “short century” came to this world with two original sins. The one that everybody is burdened with by biblical tradition, and the second one, pinned only on White people, that of being White.

That “shame” we are born with and to which we get used to since the earliest years of our lives directs and conditions our lives in every social interaction, and it represents a central core of our education. We are taught that White people are bad, that being proud of our cultural inheritance is wrong and ridiculous, and that National Socialism is the worst ideology and political vision of all. We grow used to fear the words themselves.

Then how come so many of us resist the shaming with such effective brainwashing and turn out to be National Socialist? What is it that makes the difference? When does it happen that we decide to stand up for our rights?

Of course, every National Socialist has his own story to tell, but I would dare say that all of us had hard times to deal with on the way. It is hard to be a National Socialist these days and, even though I personally find that struggling is the best training for victory, it still keeps a lot of good men from joining our ranks.

This is a story of inspiration.

Again, if I were to be asked “gun to the head” what was my moment of no-turning-back, I would probably say the day I saw Riefenstahl’s masterpiece film “Triumph of the Will”. The very closing scene is the notorious speech Adolf Hitler addressed at the closure of the sixth National Socialist Party Congress on Sept. 8th, 1934 in Nürnberg. A written transcript will do no justice to the impact that such speech can have on someone who is following the path to NS, but I’ll just note down some impressions.

“The Sixth Party Rally is coming to an end. What millions of Germans outside our ranks may simply have rated as an imposing display of political power was infinitely more for hundreds of thousands of fighters; the great personal, political and spiritual meeting of the old fighters and battle comrades. And perhaps, in spite of the spectacular forcefulness of this imposing review of the armies of the Party, many among them were wistfully thinking back to the days when it was difficult to be a National Socialist.”

Sounds familiar, doesn’t it? THESE are the days when it is difficult to be a National Socialist. No wonder here you can hear the emotion in the Führer’s voice. It’s the same struggle all over again, isn’t it?

For when our Party comprised just seven people, it already formulated two principles: it wanted to be a truly ideological party; it wanted, uncompromisingly, sole and absolute power in Germany.

We, as a party, had to remain a minority, because we mobilized the most valuable elements of fight and sacrifice in the nation, and they are never a majority but always a minority. And since the best racial component of the German nation, proudly self-assured, courageously, and daringly, demanded leadership of the Reich and the people, the people followed its leadership in ever greater numbers and subordinated themselves to it.

The German people are happily aware that the eternal flight of appearances has now been replaced by one stable pole, which sensing and knowing that it represented the very best German blood, rose to the leadership of the nation and is determined to keep this leadership, and exercise it, and never give it up again. There will always be only one segment of a people who will be really active fighters, and more is demanded of them than of the millions of other people. For them it is not enough to simply say, "I believe;" they take an oath, "I shall fight!"

There it is. That could be considered the very moment when I felt that I NEEDED to be part of that one segment. That is when my fight began.

The party will for all times be the leadership reservoir of the German people, unchangeable in its teachings, hard as steel in its organization, pliable and adaptable in its tactics, and in its total appearance the manifestation of the spirit of the nation. Again it must be that all decent Germans become National Socialists. Only the best National Socialists become party members.

Formerly, our opponents saw to it that through prohibition and persecution our movement was periodically purged of the light chaff that began to settle in it. Now we must practice selectiveness ourselves and expel what has proved to be rotten and therefore not of our kind. It is our wish and intent that this state and this Reich shall endure through the millennia ahead. We can rejoice in the knowledge that the future belongs totally to us.

Where the older generations might still waver, the youth is sworn to us and given to us, body and soul. Only if we realize in the Party the ultimate essence and idea of National Socialism, through the joint effort of all of us, will it forever and indestructibly be a possession of the German people and the German nation. Then the splendid and glorious army of the old and proud armed services of our nation will be joined by the no less tradition-bound leadership of the Party and together these two establishments will form and firm the German people and carry on their shoulders the German state and German Reich.

At this hour, tens of thousands of party comrades are beginning to leave town. While some are still reminiscing, others are getting ready for the next roll call, and always people will come and go, and always they will be gripped anew, gladdened, and inspired, for the idea and the Movement are expressions of the life of our people and therefore, symbols of eternity.

Long live the National Socialist Movement. Long live Germany!

Doesn't it feel like we are fighting the same battle all over again? Shall we be proud to be honoured to feel so close to the heroes that showed us the way to the right world order? One thing for sure is: the path is still traced, it is up to us not to lose track.

My New Home

I was lucky!

My new home wasn't too bad.

Aside from the lack of windows. (I certainly did not miss television and Internet.)

The staff was polite and professional. Physically attractive people. Especially the ladies!

The food was good. A mixture of farm wife and German cooking. Lots of meat and garden fresh vegetables. Even home baked bread and cookies.

Dogs, cats, and other animals roamed the halls. "Extra security."

Were they trying to keep us IN? Or somebody else OUT?

Occasionally I saw Helga escort an elderly fellow to a door with the sign "Eintritt verboten!" They would disappear for hours.

The rumor was that the old guy was allowed to visit town. But only with an escort. I do not know why. Perhaps he was senile. Sometimes wandered off and got lost.

Actually, I was a little jealous of him, because he got to spend so much time with Helga. Even though he was obviously too old to make full use of this golden opportunity.

There were also other exits marked "Ausgang." These underground tunnels led to small buildings disguised as unused outhouses scattered across the prairie.

NSK: Your current projects are obviously philosophical and art related.

Please describe your views on the impact of such topics in politics.

Molly: Well I try to still update the photo gallery, but mostly I've been concentrating on Adolf Hitler and the Army of Mankind (www.mourningtheancient.com/truth.htm). I'm at 21 pages now, and I have so much more to do. Studying WWII is an absolute minefield of information. You seek out information on one thing and find two more things to research. It feels a bit like you are an archeologist, unearthing the buried past. A past that they would rather not be brought to light. We can thank the internet again for the flood of information and pictures. Extremely rare stuff has

The Fight Goes On !

Seventy years after the capitulation of the Wehrmacht on May 8, 1945, the postwar National Socialist movement is stronger than ever not only in Germany, but throughout Europe.

Decades of mass murder, expulsion, persecution, and defilement have not sufficed to destroy the seed of the brilliant idea of our much loved Führer Adolf Hitler.

All National Socialists and other racially-aware countrymen and racial kinmen fight with us for the preservation.

The movement has indeed become stronger, but the danger of biological folk death is also much greater today than in the past.

The desperate enemy is in the process of committing genocide against all White folk. His means are non-White immigration, culture destruction, and re-education.

Whether "Hitler" or "Hitler", whether in election battle or street battle, whether armed with propaganda material or on a battlefield of a different kind, every National Socialist must do his duty!
