Genuine Heroism

National Socialism does not suffer from a lack of heroes and heroines. Their deeds, their accomplishments, and, above all, their sacrifices serve us as an example, an obligation, and a source of strength.

My generation, the first “postwar generation”, still had the chance to personally meet many of these heroes. I remember visiting the famous Colonel Hans-Ulrich Rudel in his home in Kufstein, Tirol in the 1970s. A great honor!

But there are many other comrades who have had an even greater influence on me. First, I spent more time with them than with the Colonel, and second, they were “just normal people”, even though they did a lot more than “normal”.

There were the old SA comrades Walter Luttermann and Karl-Ferdinand Schwarz, the married Müller couple and “Armin” of the Hitler Youth generation, Thies Christophersen, the fighters of the postwar generation such as Michael Kühnen, Gottfried Küssel, and others who remain unnamed only for security reasons.

Some of these comrades and their lives made an especially strong impression on me.

...1945. The war is over. All is lost. Life has become meaningless. "Gretchen" walks into the forest to the railroad tracks. She sits down on the tracks and waits for a train, which will end this sad life. She ponders. Then she makes a different decision. If she survives, perhaps one can one day do something in the spirit of the Führer. She stands up and goes home. Years pass. In the spring of 1972 an expellee from Breslau says there is a NSDAP/AO. She becomes one of the first members, one of the most hard-working volunteers, and a generous financial backer, although not rich and very modest in life style. She does volunteer work year after year, decade after decade. At an old age, blindness sets in. But she continues to work – she can still fold and stuff mailing pieces.

...Mortally ill with cancer. Can hardly eat or sleep. Walking is difficult and tiring. But "FW" can still do something: he drags oneself to the desk and does computer work. Hours long. Because it is hard to stand up and return to the easy chair. Day after day. Year after year. On the morning of the last day alive, this is still the routine. That afternoon death comes.

...1945. The young soldier, "Armin", continues to fight after the armistice. Later he is captured, but not identified as a Werewolf fighter. Four years in a special POW camp for unrepentant Nazis. Finally freedom. Immediately resumes political activism. Prison. Wife leaves. Again freedom, political activism, and a major role in the expansion of the NSDAP/AO in the 1970's. But a traitor means prison. Second wife leaves.

...Four years political imprisonment – without parole to the very last day. Then the day of freedom. Back to political work. A year of intensive activity. Followed by four more years of prison. Free again, active again, right up to death. His name: Michael Kühnen. He was the most important National Socialist leader of his generation in Germany.

..."B." wishes to marry, but the party needs workers and money. A family will just have to wait a few years. But illness comes despite youth. A family no longer comes, rather death.

..."R." is crippled in the Vietnam War. Both legs gone. One arm gone. Other arm injured. Still not helpless. Telephone work is possible. Thanks to this telephone work, the NSDAP/AO expands its television program from one to sixteen cities within one year.

...A crisis. "M." steps in and takes over tasks without training. Free time and profession are traded for political work, aggravation, worry, and stress. He holds out for years until the crisis is over and his large family can again have priority.

Comrades!

These are true stories!

I have worked with these comrades closely, sometimes for decades. We owe the accomplishments of the NSDAP/AO over the past three decades to them.

May they serve you as example and obligation, as comfort and inspiration, as they have served me.

May some of you become examples for those who will later join our ranks and carry on the holy swastika banner when we, too, are called to that great storm-troop in the sky.

...For the flag means more than death!

- Gerhard Lauck

Media Excerpts

The praise from our friends gives us encouragement. However, the recognition from our enemies provides an even more persuasive verification of our effectiveness. It is certainly just as sincere, but less biased in our favor. And hence all the more convincing!

“In a special report earlier this year on German Neo-Nazis, the ADL singled out Lauck as the movement’s most dangerous propagandist. – Los Angeles Times, September 7, 1993

“The rising problem of neo-Nazism in Germany, sporadic outbreaks of violence in America and Lauck’s recent expansion to new hate markets in other countries has set off alarms in agencies that monitor extremist activity...

“The agency (Germany’s Office for the Protection of the Constitution) says Lauck is the top supplier of propaganda to the German Nazi underground...

“In the past year, Chancellor Helmut Kohl made ‘several attempts to convince the Americans how important it was to stop either the printing of the material or the export of the material,’ said Hannelore Kohler of the German government’s German Information Center in New York City...”

“From the Midlands, Lauck’s web of contacts stretches throughout Europe and North and South America. He supplies propaganda, encouragement, direction and in some cases money to racists on the radical-right fringes of predominantly white countries...

“Trying to keep him out of their country, German authorities once jailed Lauck for four months. They have banned him for life. But they have not stifled his involvement. Since the fall of the Berlin wall, their problem – and Lauck’s German network – has grown.

“Moreover, in the past two years Lauck has expanded into more than 30 countries. His organization publishes tabloid-format quarterlies in English, German, Swedish, Danish, Hungarian, Dutch, French, Spanish, Portuguese and Italian. He also sends U.S. dollars and German marks into Russia to finance a Russian-language paper printed there...

“In the past year, Lauck has also beefed up his U.S. operations. He sponsors two “white power” TV shows on the public-access channels of 15 American cities.

“The Jewish Anti-Defamation League, B’nai B’rith, which has monitored Lauck throughout his career, calls him a ‘world-class’ racist whose expansions provide cause for international concern.

“‘He has all the elements of being important in the world of hatred,’ said I. Robert Wolfson of Omaha, director of the Plains Region of the Anti-Defamation League. ‘That is, large numbers, a well-funded operation that is international in scope, a fairly sophisticated idea of his goals and tactics, and the means to do something about it.

“Wolfson predicts that Lauck will use his new European and Scandinavian footholds to try to legitimize Nazism as a political option internationally and increase pressure on Germany to legalize the party.

“‘There’s a confluence of events that makes a guy like this much more important than he was 20 years ago,’ Wolfson said...

“In more than 200 criminal investigations in 1992, Lauck’s propaganda was found at the crime scene or in searches of suspects’ residences.

“‘Once every three days we produce either a tabloid newspaper in professional format or a TV show,’ Lauck said, ‘plus handling the mail orders and the faxes and the interviews and this stuff.’

“His claims are backed up by agencies that are his enemies.” – Sunday World-Herald (Omaha) September 26, 1993
