The Second Revolution Volume II: The People's State

Part 2

The peace National Socialism is peace!

No other term has been used by democrats and Bolshevists as much as "peace" and "peace policy". This is probably due to the fact that the "crusaders for democracy and humanity", the Allies of the Second World War and their German servants, have not even rudimentarily succeeded in shaping a peace order and ending the war against Germany. All the more they talk about it and try to prove to the peoples of Europe that peace has broken out for more than thirty years.

This is wrong, both morally and legally. As long as Europe and Germany - the heart of the continent - are divided and at the mercy of foreign masters, one cannot speak of peace.

Not only the German people, but all nations of Europe are more or less dependent on the two superpowers, are prevented from shaping their future in free selfdetermination. The horrible, bleeding border in the middle of Germany and the robbery of border areas, which together make up about a quarter of the territory of the Reich, are of course even more painful for Germany than the situation of other nations. But our sympathy goes above all to those who are threatened with national death - such as the Baltic peoples and the Ukrainian nation. To speak of peace here is mocking cynicism, is a slap in the face of the oppressed peoples in East and West.

As long as law and freedom are not secured for all nations of Europe, we live in a post-war order, which does not go back to a peace treaty, but to the armistice agreements of 1945. It is the aim of the German freedom movement to establish a true peace order in Europe and thus to replace the unfortunate post-war order by an occidental-ethnic New Order in the whole of Europe!

National Socialism is peace!

The moral side also corresponds to the legal situation:

The German Wehrmacht, in view of the hopeless military development, had laid down its arms on May 8, 1945. This surrender extended only to the end of hostilities and affected neither the existence of the Greater German Reich nor its internal order.

The Reich President appointed by the Führer, Grand Admiral Dönitz and his government were de facto recognized by the Allies as rulers: They did not insist on individual capitulations by the front-line units, but negotiated the details of the overall capitulation with the Supreme Command of the Wehr-macht, which was subordinate to the Reich government.

The result of the unconditional surrender of the Wehrmacht was the complete occupation of the territory of the Reich by the four Allied victorious powers. Even this step did not change the legal situation of the Reich and its government, which up to this point still had extensive control and whose decisions were also carried out by military and administrative agencies. The occupation rule and the illegal arrest that took place a few weeks later merely prevented the Reich government under Grand Admiral Dönitz from actually carrying out its governing activities.

It is important to bear in mind that the assumption of power by the occupying powers, the division of the Reich, the separation of the Ostmark and other border provinces, and the subsequent establishment of a democratic and a Bolshevik shadow government in the respective zones of occupation, has much to do with power and force, but little to do with international law and nothing at all to do with the freedom of a people to shape its own internal order.

The unprecedented banditry of the arrest of a legitimate government and the arbitrary seizure of power by the occupying forces in a country that had merely surrendered militarily is not a rights-creating act, but a clear violation of international law. It follows:

"ALL POSTWAR GERMAN GOVERNMENTS IN BRD, DDR AND BR/AUSTRIA ARE AND WERE ILLEGAL!"

The only legitimate representative of the Greater German Reich is Reich President Dönitz, who never resigned and never recognized the post-war order of the victors.

The Greater German Empire essentially rested on three pillars:

DIE WEHRMACHT had surrendered unconditionally in 1945. An attempt - for example as a werewolf underground organization - to break this armistice would have no chance.

THE REICH GOVERNMENT, as the center of the state organism, passed to Grand Admiral Dönitz after the death of the Führer. The latter is therefore still until his resignation or death - the lawful head of state of the Greater German Reich, but for reasons of age he no longer takes part in the political struggle for Germany. However, he did not object when the speaker of the German Reichstag and leader of the "Freiheitsbewegung Deutsches Reich", comrade Manfred Röder, took over the state-legal representation of the Reich. Only the future can prove whether this step was sensible.

THE NSDAP was declared the sole political will of the nation by the law on the unity of party and state. The movement is thus, even today, the unrestricted and rightful spokesperson for the people and the Reich.

Of course, these legal considerations have only limited value for the political struggle for Greater Germany. However, it is useful to keep in mind how fragile the foundations of international law are for the post-war occupation German regimes in East and West and why we are fighting the occupation states.

We National Socialists demand the end of the postwar period!

The end of the post-war period, that means concretely:

Lifting of the Nazi ban,

Restoration of the Greater German Reich's ability to act, noutlawing the territorial integrity and national sovereignty of the German nation and the immediate commencement of peace negotiations with the goal of a pan-European peace treaty that will make possible a secure and free coexistence of peoples and will not obstruct the path to the necessary, völkisch-rassische New Order.

National Socialism is peace!

In fact, the German freedom movement is the only political grouping in our country that is serious about the slogan of "peace policy. Peace policy is the attempt to overcome the post-war order!

The conclusion of a peace treaty has the sense to bring about a real reconciliation of the occidental nations on the basis of law and freedom. Only such a peace policy will put an end to the Second World War against Germany and give us the certainty that there will never again be a fratricidal war in Europe.

National Socialism is peace!

We therefore take the heralds of the phrases of "democracy" and "humanity", the great "knights of international law", at their word. We appeal to the former enemy powers and their collaborators: "Recognize the German freedom movement, as the representative of the German nation, and let us make a peace of law and freedom! It is not due to us National Socialists that Germany is still divided and that Europe has known only a peace based on violence and not a real peace!"

The national freedom fighters and the peoples of Europe have long been united. They say: "Never again war between the white peoples! We want peace!"

If democrats and Bolshevists refuse to renounce the postwar methods of violence and respect international law, the freedom fighters - National Socialists, National Socialists and Fascists of Europe - will sweep them away and make a peace of nations!

National Socialism is peace!

World power and world politics

The growing forces of nationalism worldwide are breaking up the bipolar world order, the division of the earth between the superpowers USA and USSR. New power blocs are emerging, great nations are awakening - China, Arabia and Brazil may be just a few examples. For us, this development has three advantages:

The end of the world's division into two parts leads to the loosening of old power blocs, and an alliance with newly emerging world powers increases the chances of a neutral "Third Way" policy to overcome the division of Germany and Europe.

The new powers are no longer part of the victorious order of World War II. They approach Germany with an open mind and, in some cases, even on friendly terms. Their growing importance strikes at the power of the victorious powers USA and USSR and loosens the stranglehold they have held our people in for decades. The victorious powers Great Britain and France have already sunk back into the darkness of history and will not prevent Germany's rebirth.

The new powers define themselves mostly as non-aligned, are possible partners in a nationalist world front, which must understand itself as anti-democratic, anti-communist and anti-Zionist. A national-socialist Germany will be able to fit meaningfully into this world front. Here we see the basis of German world politics.

The mention of names of possible allies in this context does not, of course, imply any anticipation of the orientation of future German foreign policy, nor does it imply any assertion that these states, in their present form of government and state-hood, would already be prepared to pursue such a policy. Something else is decisive:

The National Socialist People's State must grow into a leading power of the Non-Aligned and participate in a nationalist world front which will sweep away the post-war order and may be regarded as the precursor of a community of nations based on national and racial foundations.

So Germany will once again help shape world politics.

Germany is a world power that does not dare to use its considerable power to promote national interests. We will change that. We cannot wait for other powers to act in a way that suits our goals. We will act ourselves!

Habitat

In the long run, world power politics can only be pursued by those states that have sufficient living space at their disposal. Habitat, however, does not simply mean domination over a large area, as Mussolini meant it, who in his imperial ambition "gathered deserts" for Italy in North Africa and Abyssinia. Rather, Lebensraum means:

• Secured food base: A world power must be able to feed itself if necessary. It must not expose itself to the danger of being hit in the vital nerve by a blockade. The blockade of the Kaiserreich by the Entente powers in World War I, which contributed significantly to the disintegration of the home front, shows us how devastating this can be.

- Secured raw material base: What applies to food must be taken into account to an almost even greater extent in the supply of raw materials. Here, too, self-sufficiency or secure access to the most important raw materials must be possible, at least for the foreseeable future.
- Secured population base: A world power must have a sufficiently large population base even today.

The huge strategic pincer movement on the Eastern and African fronts of World War II, in which the Caucasus Army and the Afrika Korps would have met on Turkish soil, would have been decisive for the war. However, the forces of an 80-million-strong nation were not sufficient for this, even with the utmost tension. Thus, the Eastern Front remained in the Caucasus and the Afrika Korps in front of Egypt.

So if Germany wants to advance into the circle of world powers, it must gain a sphere of dominion that will make it possible for at least 100 million Germans to be self-sufficient in food and raw materials.

Adolf Hitler had already recognized this at an early stage, and here lies the decisive reason for the inevitability of the Eastward expansion of the Greater German Reich. There was not only a deadly "either - or" between the National Socialist world view and the Bolshevik ideology, but also the world-historical decision between the German and the Soviet world power. It is a consequence of the criminal blindness of the West, which in its stupid, anti-fascist delusion, instead of keeping its back to us, even allied itself with Bolshevism, that the Soviet Union grew into a world power and threatens the freedom of the whole world.

We National Socialists of the new generation must draw radical consequences from the result of this struggle for world power:

The behavior of the British Empire and the United States during the Second World War shows us that the hope for an anti-communist united front with the systems of the West is a vain illusion. But the whole Nazi policy of expansion to the East, which wanted to turn the Soviet Union into the "German India" and counted on the neutrality of the Empire, was based on this very illusion. The misjudgement of the English and American policy against Germany led to the two- and multi-front war, which, together with Zionist and reactionary-Masonic machinations, caused our defeat.

The answer to this today can only be a resolute front against the systems of the West and reconciliation and close cooperation between the Germanic and Slavic peoples!

National Socialism renounces the idea of Eastern expansion!

Our territorial demands in the East are limited to the borders of 1.9.1939. The renunciation of the Eastern expansion does not mean, of course, that we now want to conquer the necessary living space in the West, or elsewhere.

Rather, the time of violent conquests and white civil wars is just as over as the time of the great colonial empires. At most, the question remains whether the black African states have not sufficiently proven their inability to govern themselves and to be independent. But even in Africa, Germany can no longer conquer a living space without the backing of either the West or the East. And even then, this would require a costly navy, which is not in the interest of German policy.

The renunciation of a position of world power would be a betrayal of Germany's task in the world and the beginning of the end of the Aryan race in Europe. The Teutons alone, the core people of the White Race, had the power to save the White Race, to win the racial struggle and to shape a new world order. On the other hand, we National Socialists have no interest in a renewed fratricidal struggle between the White nations, which would also cost our race its last positions of power and completely wipe out Germany. Now, however, unchanged our rightful borders, the Greater German Reich on 1.9.1939, are simply not sufficient as living space to secure the autarky of then at least 100 million Germans.

We therefore recognize here a new, independent task of the National Socialism of the young generation, which, although it continues to fight for a sufficient living space for the Germans in accordance with the laws of the struggle for life, must obviously break new ground in doing so.

The habitat we need includes the entire Mediterranean region, i.e. all of Europe, Turkey, Iran and all of Arabia - in other words, an expanded Imperium Romanum!
