Introduction

National Socialists did not stop being born after 1945. And many of them are of the female persuasion.

Postwar National Socialist Women is a compilation of four interviews, one article, and one obituary.

All these comrades have three things in common. They are all female, beautiful, and National Socialists!

Their ethnicities include Lithuanian, Canadian, Spanish, Swedish, and American.

Gerhard Lauck

The powerful Chicago Mayor Daley Senior once publicly vowed to close down the “Nazi headquarters.” But then his own precinct captains told him this would cost him too many votes. So he backed down!

I personally participated in a White Power rally in Marquette Park with 5,000 people by police estimate. The vast majority were pro-party. Hundreds wore White Power t-shirts with a huge swastika. (The reporters present were terrified. When the crowd started to turn against the reporters a comrade stepped in to save them.)

Despite heroic resistance the neighborhood eventually fell to the invaders.

Janina and I had to leave.

She was heart-broken. And never fully recovered.

I know this may seem hard to believe, but it’s nonetheless true:

It was not always easy to be the wife of a well-known National Socialist activist!

The ups and downs in life tend to be a bit more extreme.

Janina suffered.

A lot.

But she endured.

Janina’s physical body is now ash.

But Janina herself lives on.

In my heart.

In the hearts of all of us who love and cherish her memory.

Janina M. Lauck: A National Socialist Wife

At 05:45 on February 9, 2020, a Sunday morning, I received a not unexpected phone call from the hospice. My wife Janina had passed away. Just a minute ago.

Most people know little about her.

I had always intentionally tried to keep her out of the limelight.

Keep her safe.

Janina was born in Chicago on May 5, 1950. Her parents had fled Lithuania at the end of the war to escape the communists. They spoke Lithuanian in the home. Although born in America Janina did not learn English until she went to kindergarten.

I first met Janina at the corner of 72nd and Fairfield. I was returning from Germany, where I had been a defense witness at the famous Bückeburg trial after receiving temporary immunity from arrest.

This beautiful former Lithuanian television model was also a good cook. And pro-NS!

We quickly fell madly in love, became engaged, and got married the following year. (She had already turned down marriage proposals from two millionaires.)

For ten years we lived in Marquette Park and I became a marketing executive. (Excellent co-workers back in Lincoln enabled me to continue political work despite distance and employment.)

Janina lived most of her life in the Lithuanian community in Marquette Park on Chicago's southwest side. This neighborhood fiercely resisted the Black invasion.

Marquette Park was also a National Socialist stronghold!

Molly

Translation of the NS KAMPFRUF interview with Molly of MOURNINGTHEANCIENT.COM.

NSK: Please introduce yourself.

Molly: Hi there, I'm Molly from www.mourningtheancient.com. I'm one of the resident WWII historians (Adolf Hitler and the Army of Man-kind) and the general web mistress. I also model for the website occasionally.

NSK: Please describe your political views.

Molly: I am a proud National Socialist. To me there is no other way. I think that National Socialism is the only thing that can save this planet. I believe each race and culture can adopt their own form of National Socialism. Each race should have national, cultural and racial pride. But each race should also stay in their own nature-ordained area on this planet. Race mixing harms each race involved. It is racial suicide.

NSK: When did you start your political work and what was your motivation to do so?

Molly: Truth be told, the very reason we began Mourning the Ancient (in the beginning there were three of us) was to spread the truth we had found through an entertainment medium. They say do what you know, and we knew music well, so we used music as our primary vehicle. We were young, I was still a teenager, back in 1995, and we were burning with ambition. But we also felt powerless and aimless. We experimented with our photography a lot in our spare time, and learned as much as we could. Information was rather hard to come by back then, pre-internet (for us at least). We received various newsletters and magazines from the racial underground. We especially loved William Pierce's stuff. We devoured his books Turner Diaries and Hunter, not to mention his magazine and various newsletter-type publications. Pierce was my greatest and most important living teacher. The things he taught me shocked and dismayed me. I couldn't believe some of the information. None of us could. I mean, we trusted him, but we had to find out for ourselves if some of the information was true. Some things took us a few years to verify, but we did eventually. Mind-blowing truths. They still shock me to this day. We used to receive a weak signal of his radio show here in Nebraska. We would crowd around this little radio, quiet as mice, and listen to his staticky voice. We were amazed that we could turn on our radio and hear the truth, for once in our lives. The forbidden and dangerous truth. It was thrilling and inspiring for me.

NSK: Are you organised?

Molly: No, I have stacks of books and papers everywhere! Haha. But I don't think that's what you meant. I'm not sure though how to answer this question, but I can say I've met some awesome people over the last 26 years and have made some great contacts. But ultimately I'm pretty much a loner these days. I think our Adolf Hitler and the Army of Mankind speaks for itself. I've poured years into it, and I think it shows. I get wonderful letters from all over the world and meet truly interesting, intelligent people. Our struggle attracts the best (and the worst) people in the scope and depth. A thinking person in full command of his capabilities can only come to the rational conclusion that further resistance is compulsory if truth, freedom, and prosperity are ever to become the birthright of Germanic people again.

The dream of freedom and prosperity and life in harmony with nature is not an impossible dream. It is the only dream there is. What our duty lies in today is teaching our young this truth and instilling in them the knowledge that truth and freedom are not only possible but worth fighting for in the most intelligent and efficient way possible and yes, ultimately, worth dying for. Keeping the kernels of truth alive is the most subversive and life-affirming action that can be taken. Support merit-based systems whenever and wherever you can. Support pure science, support beauty and balance, support nature, support true justice over vengeance, support freedom of speech, and support the truth. Support your racial kind however and whenever possible. In these actions, you keep alive a fire from which all other good things can spring. Keeping alive the memory of the Third Reich is the richest source of rebuilding what has been lost that there is. Support keeping available Mein Kampf and other seminal National Socialist writings. Keep hard copies in your libraries and discuss these when you can. In time, it is inevitable that they will again be taken up by the mindful people of our race. All things come again in their time.

This faith in truth and freedom will never die until the last of us is gone from the face of this earth. Such an earth will not be fit to live in for any race, let alone ours. But, until this time has come, it is our duty to continue to strive on. Let the light of truth light your way. Nature is an unstoppable force. Align with Her and the future is ours.

down. Wrong has become right. The future dystopia is upon us.

When a questioning mind like mine confronts what it has been told is pure evil in National Socialism and really looks into it—say, it reads Mein Kampf and does not find the ravings of a madman, but the measured observations of a brilliant political mind, it can only wonder what other lies have been told. Looking deeper into the newsreel footage of the time reveals a clean and orderly National Socialist society that is happy and fruitful. That greatest of evil men who walked the earth does not hide behind bullet proof shields, but walks freely among the people who are radiantly happy and healthy. His confidence is palpable. This contrasts sharply with the misery of our current age and the politicians who lie and hide behind shields and only make controlled appearances in scripted environments.

And to think this is what the allies firebombed? Really?! It boggles and repels the mind.

A serious look into the Jewish question reveals an alien cabal that as a tiny minority truly does control the media and finance, as well as all other levers of power, controlling even the opposition viewpoints! One can only come to the conclusion that Hitler was guilty only of disconnecting from these powers of interest slavery and enjoying a few sweet years of freedom and widespread prosperity as a result. Only a Jewish led world war was capable of destroying the powerhouse of a free people and then propagandizing them as “evil” forever after. The final goal, certainly, is to make resistance of any kind illegal, as anti-Semitism, and punishable by death as it was the last time they had complete power during the Jewish-led Red Terror. Further inquiry into the issue reveals a complex of lies and groundless allegations that are astonishing in their world. Many people are led to the truth by instinct, they tell me. They've always known something was off in the world, but couldn't quite put their finger on it... and then... Adolf Hitler! I think that once you realize that you've been lied to about not only Him, but WWII, everything starts to fall into place. You start to question everything around you. You realize that your teachers in school lied. That they in turn were lied to. It goes deeper and deeper, until one day you realize it is a battle bigger than all of us. It is a war that began thousands of years ago, in the sands of ancient Sumeria, and which stretches into an unknown and uncertain future. To add a little context to the beginnings of our fight in Sumeria, here is an interesting tidbit:

'According to accepted views the early history of Mesopotamia is essentially the history of a racial conflict; its events represent stages in a deadly struggle between two inimical racial groups, Sumerians and Semites. In that struggle the Semites, who could draw on racial reserves in Syria and Arabia, came out victorious. After a long-drawn and bitter fight lasting through generations they defeated, under their gifted leader Sargon, the Sumerians, who were forced thenceforth farther and farther south. Except for a short-lived Sumerian "come-back" under the Third Dynasty of Ur, that victory made the Semites masters of Babylonia forever after.'

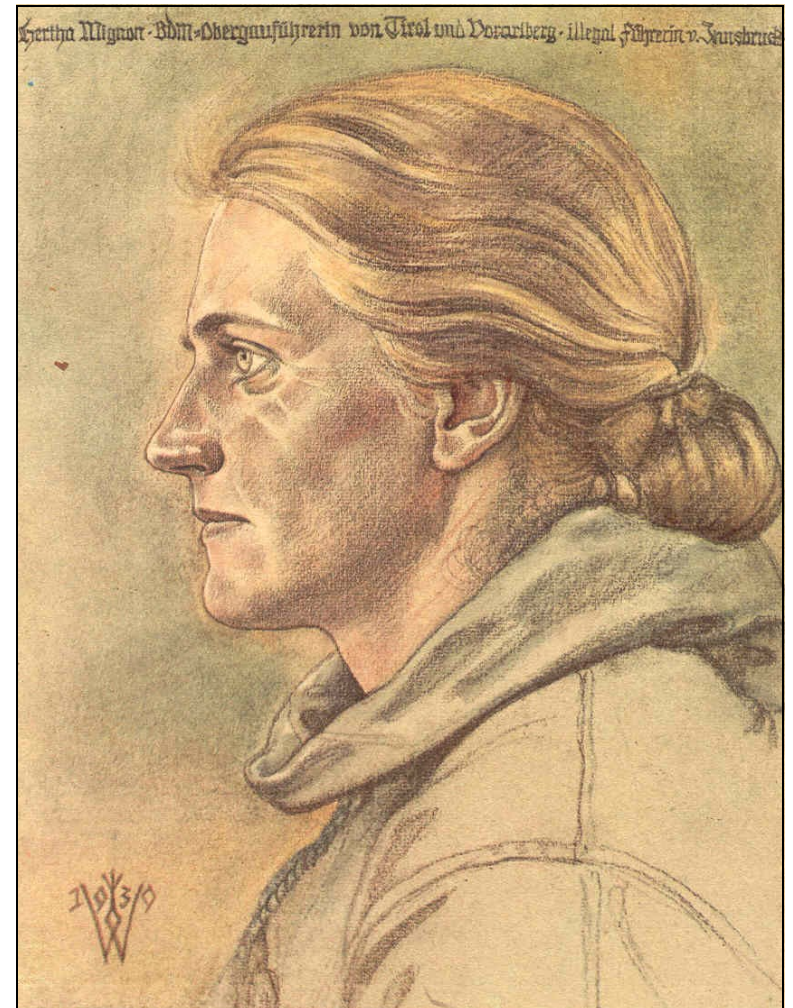

The Assumed Conflict between Sumerians and Semites in Early Mesopotamian History

NSK: Being a female, how would you personally define the role of women in politics and society per se?

Molly: I believe what the Führer believed, which is that women shouldn't be involved in politics. I think a woman's most important role is that of a mother. As a mother she is the teacher and shaper of the future. But a woman also has roles in society, like that of Gertrud Scholtz-Klink, to lead, organize and inspire generations of women -- to teach young girls how to be women. The National Socialists formed the Young Girls League (Jungmädelsbund) for girls 10-14, and the League of German Girls, for girls ages 14-18. I also think in wartime women have roles that they wouldn't have in peace. For example there were women who were used in Flak roles, or pilots even, ultimately I think we are now fighting a fight which goes beyond all traditional norms. I think women have to be used wherever they may help, whether that be in a traditional men's role or whatever. I'd even go so far as to say in this terrible struggle she should even be used in combat. I know that wasn't the norm in the Third Reich, but there were some powerful proponents who advocated for it. Like Hanna Reitsch, who volunteered to form a Kamakazi flight group (and be the first volunteer!). It's do or die. Our last stand. We are surrounded by our enemies. Our own racial Alamo. All of us Wehrwolves. We'll either bare our teeth and bite or lay down in the red snow and die.

NSK: Your country has already lost many people to Covid-19, mainly due to massive lack of prevention in the beginning and a weak healthcare system. Would you blame the government?

our race know something is terribly wrong for they are in a position to see it most clearly. Today, the best are punished. Tomorrow, they may be taken out and shot. To question this human-enforced order of things is unforgivable, yet, unavoidable for the best of minds. It is not hard to see that the world has somehow been turned upside man heart. Conversely, any enemy of the truth is ultimately doomed, just the sheer amount of energy required to hide it is unsustainable over the long term. The handmaiden of truth is “unintended consequences,” otherwise known as “homeostasis,” another force of nature. In the broader view of things, truth and reality-as-it-is must prevail.

The ground of National Socialism is the immutable laws of nature, and thus truth is of inestimable value for it can only be defined by those laws. Our understanding of truth only changes if we were mistaken about the laws of nature. The wise man or woman thus revises his or her understanding of truth to comply with his or her observations of nature. When these understandings are correct and align with these forces, we call these inalienable truths. When we err, we have the duty to revise accordingly or suffer the consequences designed for those who deny nature and life.

I, like most persons today, was educated by the Marxist-controlled public educational system. This fanatical anti-life and anti-nature, and by definition anti-truth, and false religion is a human-made demon that requires tremendous amounts of energy in the form of human support, to exist. To go against the very currents of life and nature itself takes tremendous amounts of human denial, fear, and lies. Such a system must necessarily run inefficiently and have human-designed consequences that are feared more than death itself. Only mediocrity can remain. Any system of true merit is, in spirit, counter to this monster. I found myself at root completely incompatible with such lies and subterfuge.

The myth that the majority support this anti-truth, anti-merit, anti-life behemoth keeps many people in silent complicity. The very best in athletics and scholastics of Molly: Hmmm... a tricky question. I think the whole Covid thing is being used as a political weapon. Perhaps it is a tool to take away our rights, it sure seems like it. I've known a handful of people who have had it, and they've told me a variety of things. Some people caught a more severe form of the flu, while others reported it wasn't that bad. I've also known a few old people who have died from it, but they all had co-morbidities, like diabetes, etc. The government's insane lockdowns have butchered small businesses and the economy in general. But they just keep printing their fiat currency like it is some magical money. Meanwhile the mega companies like Amazon report record business due to the lockdowns. It's all rather insane, and now I'm just waiting for them to force people to get their poisonous vaccination. It's already happening in England and France. If you don't have the vax you are restricted from going pretty much everywhere. They are making billions and billions with their phony vaccinations. Even though studies show vaccinated people catch this flu as often, and in some studies, more, than unvaccinated people. Now they talk of endless 'variants' and 'boosters'. Will this madness ever end?

NSK: How strong is the enemy in your country?

Molly: Well, we all know that the Enemy chose the United States as its headquarters since the end of WWII. So the Enemy is quite strong here. If not for our 'pesky' constitution we'd all probably be in prison camps or mass graves by now. But with the internet, something the Enemy never could have planned for, its power has been weakened. Information that was once nearly impossible to find now is at your fingertips. Unfortunately this is changing and censorship is gaining ground like never before. But people are on to their lies. Truth has 'infected' the world. More people than ever before have learned the truth about what's happened and what's happening. The bottom line is if we lose this war there won't be a Gulag in our future, there will be an unmarked mass grave. At least we'll be buried in good company though. Haha. But seriously, the traffic on our website has risen dramatically. When Trump was running for President, the first time, traffic absolutely exploded. And the most visited parts of the website, by many times over, were the WWII truth sections. I can tell you this: there are a whole hell of a lot more people who are on to Them than we imagine. A quiet majority. The lurkers. Let's just hope they come out of the shadows soon and join us or it will be too late. People need to stop worrying about their names being put on some list. Those lists are badges of honor. Stand up and fight or lay down and die. Just stay legal and you have very little to worry about. And to our brothers and sisters in Occupied Europe, where freedom pretty much doesn't exist, be smart, work and fight in the shadows. Remain anonymous. We are with you!

NSK: What are the main problems of your country nowadays?

Molly: Wow, I don't think we have room on our hard drives for that answer! But seriously, things have gone absolutely insane. I mean like we could never have imagined. I follow politics and this clown world pretty closely, so I see it all. I can't believe how crazy it has gotten and in such a short amount of time. It's like the Enemy imagines he sees victory and has gotten excited, let down his guard, and gone full blown globo-homo in fast forward. You

Why I am a “Nazi”

The author of this article was recruited by the NSDAP/AO in early 2014 and immediately became an extremely valuable co-worker. This National Socialist comrade played a key role in our Video Project in the spring of 2014, which, in turn, enabled the NS NEWS BULLETIN expansion the following spring.

No one is more surprised than I am to find myself a late-life convert to an ideology that has been so maligned as to be popularly understood as the most evil thought-crime possible and the brainchild of the most evil man to walk the earth, National Socialism and Adolf Hitler.

I have, throughout my life, been a devout worshipper of the truth, where ever it may be and in whatever form it may take. This has led me down some interesting paths in life. Sometimes these paths have been reviled by family members who were not so honest in their dealings and certainly made it increasingly difficult to work in a world that is increasingly corrupt and soulless. I have finally come to a point in life where I am of an age and physical state that work is impossible, but the shining truth, in all its glory, still abides in me and the actions I choose to take. I have found it a worthy and faithful companion through life.

One thing I have found out about the truth is, while it lives in one heart, it does not die. It takes no special supports and complex of lies and subterfuges to not only exist, but thrive and prosper. In fact, no system of justice and laws can be considered viable without it. In essence, it has the characteristics of fire and air, earth and water. It is very much like a force of nature, but it abides in the huyou have to know what it means to be European (in Europe or in America) to be able to fight for your race. Finally, the main thing, that which is not corrupted or transgressed by the winds of our era. The cornerstone of our ideas, MEIN KAMPF and the Führer's speeches, as well as the essential books from the party library, such as "The manifesto against usury and the slavery to Interest" by Feder.

DA: Thanks for the interview. Keep up the good work. Victory is ours! Feel free to add some final words to the readers.

Isabel Medina Peralta:

I want to thank you for the commendable work you do with the publications of your magazine, as well as your interest in knowing the history of my nation and giving me a space to expose the problems that suffocate my country and my continent.

Victory will be ours and the empire of a thousand years will triumph.

Heil Hitler!

know, dropping his cards and just drooling at the bit. We have toddler trannies, drag queens reading to our children in libraries, children getting hormonally mutilated to try to change their sex, teenagers getting 'sex change' surgeries, our founding fathers' statues being torn down and vandalized, traditional white authors being banned from libraries and schools, children being taught in school that their ancestors were evil and that they themselves are evil... I could go on and on. One of the greatest videos I've seen documenting the war on White people is right here: <https://www.bitchute.com/video/HUQZaer4iIMI/> - I normally don't like to drop URLs because they are deleted so often, but hopefully some of you will be able to view this video, save it and repost it before that happens. One of our anonymous comrades spent an incredible amount of time on this and it is truly a spectacular job. It'll make your blood boil and your skin crawl.

NSK: Your various projects are labeled as "Mourning the Ancient". Which ancient times do you exactly mean by that and why do you mourn it?

Molly: You know I was always into the past. Whether it be the ancient Sumerians (who were a White race, by the way. History books from the 1800s even refer to them as 'the Great White Ones', yet now they have made them non-White, like so many other historical figures...), the Spartans, Greeks, Romans, Vikings, Celts, Germanic tribes, and even the non-White races like the Inca, Aztec, Mayan, etc. etc. I think they possessed a freedom and unity we could only dream of. But ultimately it's a great misnomer. When I dream about the past, I go directly to the twelve magical years of National Socialist Germany. A time of greatness never before experienced in history. Culturally, artistically and technologically there was a vast leap. But also socially. It brought out the greatness in people. I've studied the Third Reich until my eyes bled practically and yet feel like I've only scratched the surface. Like one lifetime truly isn't enough to learn of their mighty struggle and magical victories. There is still such a mystery surrounding them. Our National Socialist mothers and fathers are our Knights of Camelot. Adolf Hitler is of course our King Arthur. They are such a legend to us young ones, those born decades after Their martyrdom. Sometimes it seems like they must have been some great dream, or some grand illusion, nothing so spectacular could have existed on this old, sad, corrupt earth. Yet, they were real. It will never cease to amaze me. And I must say, men like Gerhard Lauck have kept the dream alive, all these hard years. He has battled doubt, loneliness, betrayal, incarceration in a foreign country, and all the rest of the daily darkneses, and come out on top. He's never bent, never tired, and has kept the heart of our dream beating, all of these embattled years. It's men like him, with the very world against him, but who fight on. Come what [deleted] may. To you, Gerhard Lauck!

NSK: Your current projects are obviously philosophical and art related.

Please describe your views on the impact of such topics in politics.

Molly: Well I try to still update the photo gallery, but mostly I've been concentrating on Adolf Hitler and the Army of Mankind (www.mourningtheancient.com/truth.htm). I'm at 21 pages now, and I have so much more to do. Studying WWII is an absolute minefield of infortributing culturally with writings and acts...

etc. I am currently working on a book that I hope to publish shortly. My plans for the future are none other than to continue fighting for our ideas, without rest. In a man's militancy there are two poles that we should not ignore, Siegfried and Godmund: the eagle and the serpent, contemplation and action. Without a doctrinal basis, resolute action cannot be carried out, and without action, ideas are worth nothing more than gathering dust on a shelf. More specifically, I am preparing myself to be able to carry out what the German Republic seemed to intuit in its expulsion decree: National Socialism as a great giant organized throughout Europe and in the sister countries. I have proposed to fight for National Socialism to be legal again and be seen for what it is, a doctrine that must transmute the future of our era.

DA: Do you want to recommend any literature? If yes: which books?

Isabel Medina Peralta:

I highly recommend English-speaking National Socialists to make an effort to translate Spanish pieces as they are immeasurably rich. I recommend translating and publishing in your country "La Conquista del Estado" and "Fascism in Spain?" by Ramiro Ledesma Ramos. I also recommend reading "Nuestras Ideas" by Ramon Bau, an ideal text to introduce new comrades to our worldview. On the other hand, I believe that in order to be a National Socialist and truly understand what it means, the young militant must first know works such as the Iliad, which I consider the "Bible of the Aryan", as well as Chivalric novels, The Faust, the main Wagnerian plots... etc. First rope... But honestly, although it naturally matters to me and affects me, I accept these consequences with joy because I know that I am fighting for a cause greater than my own life.

My personal advice is that young militants who are still on time try not lose the support of their family and childhood friends, as we must not abandon that part of our life because we are fighting precisely to preserve and strengthen it. If that is impossible then go ahead, we must be stoic and do our duty. We must situate ourselves as insignificant individuals and despise our pleasures and luxuries, but at the same time value ourselves as springs and bulwarks of an immortal idea: thanks to us the flame of National Socialism is kept alive.

You have to be a fanatic, fanaticism moves mountains and our will must be unbreakable: As hard as our marble eagles and as light as our flag; You must learn to sacrifice.

DA: ZOG also tries to "deplatform" you (get you out of politics or get you prosecuted) How do you deal with it?

Isabel Medina Peralta:

It is a natural consequence that I assume as part of the path that I have decided to follow.

DA: Do you have projects/plans for the future?

Isabel Medina Peralta:

Continue training, studying, reading, investigating, conmation. You seek out information on one thing and find two more things to research. It feels a bit like you are an archeologist, unearthing the buried past. A past that They would rather not be brought to light. We can thank the internet again for the flood of information and pictures. Extremely rare stuff has surfaced over the years from places all over the earth. It often feels like putting together a puzzle, whose pieces are scattered all over the world. But to answer your question, of how philosophical and artistic things can impact politics, well, I think art is a powerful tool when used in political propaganda. Art can inspire us to do great things. It can fuel us when we are feeling empty and be a deadly weapon in our war. It's why I let fellow National Socialist's use any of our photography for whatever project they may have. It's an honor for me to help, truly. My greatest hope is that something I've done in my life will help to further our cause. What else could possibly be more important than that?

NSK: Some of your photographic works are pretty controversial. What was your intention to arrange them in that way?

Molly: Well it was never our intention to be controversial, but certainly some of them are. An enemy book was published a few years ago that 'examined' some of our photo shoots. It was very entertaining to read an enemy's assessment of our photography. To Them, everything had a hidden message against Them. Everything had a hidden racist or 'Nazi' connotation. Mind you, this was before we published any overt National Socialist-styled photo shoots. But it didn't matter, the photos were going to mean whatever They wanted them to. But that aside, over the years we've explored a wide variety of topics, and used a ton of symbolism, some hidden and some in your face. Speaking of, I loved the 2010 shoot Vengeance Divine II, where I stabbed and ripped a bloody skull out of the globe from 'Israel'. Not very subtle, I know, but effective, haha. After well over 100 shoots and many years, we sometimes get bored and do more 'bizarre' shoots. I like reading and thinking about fantasy topics, and I think there is a lot of fantasy infused into our photo shoots. A very small minority are a bit offended by the nudity, but these people need to lighten up, the Third Reich showed full frontal nudity in their photography books. I don't believe the human body is something offensive or dirty when used in an artistic sense.

NSK: Please describe to us your artistic influences and the things which inspire you.

Molly: I adore Breker and many of the other artists of the Third Reich, including Adolf Hitler. So much of what the Third Reich did though was artistic. When you look at the leaders, so many of them were artists before being thrust into politics. You see pictures of their streets and they look magical. Flags and pillars and statues. Beauty unbound. I love looking at everything they produced. Their war medals, daggers and even civilian awards are unmatched in history for their beauty. I get chills sometimes just looking at them. Adolf Hitler and those twelve magical years never grow old for me. It is the one thing in life I can honestly say has never grown old or boring to me. I get excited when I see a picture I've never seen before of Adolf Hitler. It doesn't happen often, but it could be some small, pixelated photo and I'm smiling like a child... I love so many of the leaders of the Third Reich and I have adored learning about them, and love to uncover things

Now Spain has the same Jewish influence as the rest of Europe, since there are no national companies. Its currency is also the euro and it is subjugated to interest and Jewish debt; the energy systems are not owned by the main suppliers but have the brand of Yahweh inscribed in their last names. The cinema or the press that is consumed is also Jewish. We are part of the world and the world today has an owner.

DA: Your political work has already aroused a lot of controversy, especially due to the strong pressure exerted by international Zionism. Did/did you suffer any consequences for this in your daily life? If so, please explain. Also explain to our younger readers how to deal with repression.

Isabel Medina Peralta:

Yes, I would be kidding myself if I denied it. The path of a political soldier is not a path of roses, it is not fun or pleasant; it is of constant sacrifice. Before I became a well-known figure in the struggle, my father kicked me out of the house because of my militant commitment. I have lost friends and relatives, and of course it is very difficult to maintain a romantic relationship in my circumstances. I've been fired from jobs and denied contracts just for ideological reasons. I'm often detained for no reason, I can't travel (and if I do travel to countries where I'm allowed to enter I have to be detained for days at customs), I have lawsuits open, and in one of them they ask me for three years in prison for a demonstration organized in the context of a Moroccan migration crisis. In February 2021, I became considered a terrorist by several countries in Eu-is needed to “trigger” these people is a violent act that arouses hatred and revulsion, and this is ineffective since hatred does not lead to resolute actions. It is necessary to understand clearly, with justice, that fighting against them must not be an action moved by hatred but by love towards your people and your family and towards the position of the world. Only men who understand this will be willing to give their lives.

DA: How strong is the enemy in your country?

Isabel Medina Peralta:

Apparently the problem is not as serious as in other European countries. In 1492 the Jews were expelled from our kingdom and we managed to become the largest empire in modern history. However, although we do not have the problem that Ukraine, Germany, Romania or Poland have, we do have and have had a serious problem. The Jews are always there, it is not enough to expel them only from our country or to force them to convert (as was done in the Inquisition) because “they are the masters of lies” and they settle again, hidden but in strategic positions. The most common Jewish type in the history of Spain was not the Ashkenazi as was the disgrace of our European brothers, but the Sephardic: a less noisy Jewish type, not so interested in politics and bloody revolutions. He was a cultural Jew who was already preparing that “black legend” so widespread about our people. He is an influential Jew who embeds himself in government and bureaucratic bodies, who becomes the adviser to a king or a republican president. Franco greatly helped international Jewry to establish itself in Spain as well, accepting its loans and giving away concessions.

I've never read or seen before. I love people like Darré, who was such a mysterious and mystical guy, or the hard-living Ley, who tragically lost the love of his life and controlled the largest organization in the Third Reich, the DAF (the German Labor Front). Or one of my favorites, who I just dedicated an incredibly difficult photo shoot to, the hero Oskar Dirlewanger, who led the Dirlewanger Brigade. This man is covered in lies, sometimes I think the enemy may hate him more than Adolf Hitler himself! They write the most evil lies about him and his brave men. Truly incredible. But the truth is he was a war hero who accomplished amazing feats. He led the most ragtag group of men in all of WWII, and did a remarkable job at it. The Dirlewanger Brigade was a second chance for many men. Soldiers who couldn't respect authority learned to respect the mighty Oskar Dirlewanger. Soldiers who were arrested for committing acts unbecoming of a soldier, or poachers, or criminals of various degrees. They were all given a second chance in the Dirlewanger Brigade. Together they did amazing things, against all odds. Enemies all around them. Behind enemy lines. It brought them closer together. They learned that the Dirlewanger Brigade was their saving grace. Their battlefield salvation and Oskar Dirlewanger was their guiding angel.

NSK: Part of your artworks are musical related; you've even released a music album already. Do you plan to release a new album in the future?

Please describe the influences and inspirations of your music.

Molly: We released two photo CDs in the past and we created galleries for each photo shoot. We used various bands to create music to play in the background. Well, sometimes we would be short a music track or two so we had to create an ambient track ourselves. We did about five or six of these and a friend of ours who did a record label, Elegy Records, liked it and told us to record a CD and he'd publish it. We named it Primitive Supremacy. Some of it was very National Socialist-themed, like the track 'He Lives!' about Adolf Hitler. It's like the saying: "Where does Adolf Hitler live? In my heart!" It was a fun project. We also did a 45 minute artistic film back in the day. Now that was a project! Doing the Mourning the Ancient film was incredibly taxing. I always wanted to do a pure National Socialist film, but I don't know if I'll ever find the time or drive. The sky is looking kind of dim. Maybe in the next life. But inspirations? Well, for the film, I looked all around me. I took all the bad, all the darkness, all the lonely sadness of this destroyed world, and put it all into the figure of a girl, in search of truth, and she finds it -- in a cemetery! But she doesn't accept this and searches on. Through bloodstained nightmares and majestic mountains, she searches on and on. If you're interested, the film is on our website to download for free, as is everything on Mourning the Ancient. No ads. No cookies. No tracking.

NSK: Did you study some of your arts, or did you learn it (all) by yourself?

Molly: No not really, I took a few years in college, but dropped out when they told me it was REQUIRED to take a 'minority sensitivity' class. I couldn't do it. Mind you this was right around the time I had discovered the truth about everything. Want to know how exactly I began my journey to the truth? I was in a small used book store owned by an Asian woman. I was looking at true crime books. I

Europe?

Isabel Medina Peralta:

We must fight against high finance, against international Jewish rule and its established system; make the natives aware that it is not our responsibility to take charge and that compassion is not the denial of your own life. Make your brothers see that they are not like us, that human beings, like any other species, present marked and irreconcilable differences and that loving races does not mean mixing and destroying them, but rather being racist and fighting for the purity and preservation of the same. Racism must be seen as a natural and positive ethic, and for that, racists must be exemplary, not get carried away by the absurd behavior of calling a black person a "monkey" on the street, because he is not a monkey. We must act at all times with exemplarity and justice, being the defenders, representatives and guardians of the superior race. The Aryan must be the light of the rest of the world.

DA: Is the current refugee crisis driving the recruitment of members and/or the influence/political force of nationalist organizations within Spain?

Isabel Medina Peralta:

A few months ago, a violent episode in Ceuta and Melilla took place: 9,000 immigrants violently crossed the border, beating policemen, occupying houses and raping women. At that time it seemed that there were more nationalists than in the SS, but after a couple of tweets these people dispersed and you can't count on them to organize a group that would go to the focus of the crisis to fight it. All that world, the rich treasure of diversity. Now, for this to exist, everyone needs to be in their place, in harmony with their environment and their community, because if they are introduced to Europe they will never be European and the chaos will be tangible. We must therefore, to eradicate the problem of immigration crisis, go to its essence, point out that which creates wars in those countries, which writes "Refugees Welcome" on the doors of Europe and boasts of the natural conflict that this collection of breeds causes. They are people and Aryan kindness should help them, in their countries, fighting against the root of the problem.

DA: Is massive immigration a threat to the Spanish? If so: in what way?

Isabel Medina Peralta:

It is a threat in terms of the destabilization they pose. For example, from the economic level, they receive state aid that comes out of the taxpayer's pocket and is not destined to repair, for example, the beautiful architecture of our cities. It is a threat in that they accept jobs paid at unworthy wages with which a Spaniard who does not receive aid and lives legally, paying his taxes and his home, could not survive, and therefore the employer devalues the wages and the Spaniard has no choice but to accept that unworthy salary thanks to the law of supply and demand. But the main problem lies in the loss of our ethnocultural identity, our natural environment and the principle of a homogeneous community where your problems are those of your neighbor.

DA: What is the solution to end this crisis of massive immigration and "refugees" for Spain and the rest of liked to study the psychology of criminals and murderers. Well there was a paperback book called Brotherhood of Murder. It was the most important book I would ever find. It changed my whole life and set me on a journey I still continue on to this day. It was a book about the hero and martyr Robert Mathews and the Brüder Schweigen. It was written by an enemy, of course, but it resonated with me. They couldn't cover up the truth of the magnificent and tragic saga of the men and women of the Silent Brotherhood. I was enthralled by their efforts. I questioned: what if what they are saying is true? You couldn't help but cheer them on during the great Brink's armored car heist! I loved Mathews depth of spirit, his sometimes boyish idealism was entirely charming, or his best comrade Gary Yarbrough's utter bravery when surrounded by the FBI. All of them were like heroes who just stepped out of a history book. Knights who dared raise their magic swords to the evil and depraved dragon of the United States Federal government. And just like some tragic tale in some fantasy book, the knights failed to stop the evil beast. But alas, the story is not over, another book is being written as we speak! The Brotherhood of Murder mentioned another important book, The Turner Diaries. I kept that book in mind for months, then like magic one day I was sitting at a friend's house looking through a catalog called Delta Press. It was a pretty crazy catalog, filled with books on how to make explosives and silencers and other strange things. Well, glancing through it, guess what I saw? Amongst the military survival manuals and gun instruction videos was a book I recognized the title of: The Turner Diaries. There it was. For sale. The legendary book hated so deeply by the system. The Turner Diaries and Pierce's other book, Hunter, which I like better, are teaching tools more than anything. Sure they have a great story, which I might say is coming more and more true every day, but they are clearly meant to teach. And teach they did. I wish I could have had the opportunity to thank Dr. Pierce. But at least I got to interview great men like David Lane, on Christmas/Yule Eve 2002 and befriend Gary Yarborough.

NSK: Your writings include also various reports. In one of these reports you did an interview with our party leader, Gerhard Lauck.

What was your motivation to do so? What is your viewpoint regarding the NSDAP/AO?

Molly: I first learned of Gerhard Lauck when he was arrested in Europe and shipped off to a German dungeon on a completely erroneous charge. I really felt for him, and kept his name in my memory, but knew little to nothing about his amazing story. Over the years I received a flyer from his organization amongst various underground CDs. It was of a big party swastika flag and his Lincoln, Nebraska address. I thought "Wow, this guy lives like a half an hour from me!" Over the years that followed I learned about the truly amazing things he and the NSDAP/AO did. Lauck circulated TONS of flyers and literature to occupied Germany and all over Europe. More than any man alive, I've read. His booklet reprints are everywhere. I see them constantly on various sites, for sale or otherwise. Gerhard might be one of the most consistent men in the whole struggle. He's also extremely low key. The man himself is pretty relatively unknown, I'm guessing that's the way he generally wants it. It was a great honor to be able to talk to him and interview such a legend in the movement.

development; but racial, since the coexistence of biologically different elements is not possible. Their customs, ethics or capacities are essentially different from ours and they will always be harmful elements outside their natural territories, since it destabilizes and hinders our society. If we are already talking about miscegenation, racial supplanting, then we will have to decide that it is a problem to be eradicated as soon as possible, since a destroyed neighborhood can be repaired, but mixed blood takes generations and centuries to harmonize again, and even that way it would never get back to the first item.

DA: What about the new mass immigration and "refugee" crisis? Is Spain affected by this like other countries? If so: in what way?

Isabel Medina Peralta:

It is something disastrous and we must do a meditation exercise here. We must understand that these men represent human lives and that they come here at their own risk fleeing from a conflict or from circumstances that are not at all conducive to life. They are not the culprits, although they arrive in Europe, and many commit crimes and cause terror. We must understand that those people are not capable of understanding the world as we understand it, our culture and civilized behavior cannot be demanded of them. We cannot demand of them that instead of fighting and creating gangs they shall pick up a piano and perform a serenade. We cannot and should not do it because they are not us; what we must do is preserve the beauty of the world, the tribal dances of the Surma, the rites of the Maasai and the sculptures of Botticelli or the Wagnerian operas, since everything makes up the polychromy of the bourg)?

Isabel Medina Peralta:

It is an occupation regime, both militarily, economically, and judicially. That conglomerate of papers that make up the constitution focuses on what they consider the main problem of the country: the advance of National Socialism. They strive to ban everything, symbols, history... but above all they strive to fight against the truth. They want to reduce and subjugate one of the most capable races in human history. They want to make them forget what it is to be a German, not to produce culturally, scientifically, theoretically. They want to strip them of their particular character and reduce them to a weak and sick people without personality or identity. Germany is not sovereign nor does it govern itself; Germany is a country of slaves, and to subvert this it needs a popular revolution embedded in the framework of international cooperation. The National Socialists of the whole world owe it to Adolf Hitler.

DA: Spain, as one of the European borders in this particular area, was one of the main victims of the mass immigration and “refugee” crisis in 2014/2015. Are there still measurable effects of this historic crisis? What about the situation in Spanish territory in North Africa?

Isabel Medina Peralta

Naturally, well, many of them managed to settle. The problem is not so much the economic expense, although this is very high and magnanimously superior to the state money that is inserted in maternity, art or research and NSK: Do you plan any further projects for the future?

Molly: Well, I plan on expanding the website even more. Like I said I have a mountain of more material for the Adolf Hitler and the Army of Mankind section. I recently had the honor of interviewing Fred Leuchter over the phone. So I'll be posting my first ever audio interview sometime soon. What a legend Leuchter is. They tried to destroy him, they only made him stronger and more determined. I have some other ideas of doing some video work. Maybe some artistic bits but also maybe some more political videos. I guess time will tell. But regardless of what I do, I will never stop fighting. Like Gerhard Lauck has taught us, consistency is a mighty weapon. I've met many people over the years who have just completely dropped out of the struggle. I can't imagine ever doing that myself. It is an impossibility. As Adolf Hitler said: "We will not capitulate - no, never! We may be destroyed, but if we are, we shall drag a world with us - a world in flames." and Savitri Devi said: "If my comrades are not destined to rule the world, then away with it! A shower of atom bombs upon it and in place of its meaningless chatter about 'love' and 'peace' the voice of the howling wind over its ruins."

NSK: In many of your photo shoots are also bookshelves portrayed.

Which book(s) would you recommend and why?

Molly: First, I should say, since people are always asking, which version of 'Mein Kampf' should I get? And generally the 'Stalag Edition' is the answer. It was the only English version of 'Mein Kampf' authorized by the German government and Adolf Hitler. But it is not perfect. It has a rocky history in itself. But generally get the 'Stalag Edition'. And yes, you can probably find a .pdf of it on the internet. And no, you won't be put on a list if you order it (at least not in the USA). Another interesting book is called 'Mein Kampf: A Translation Controversy'. One of my favorite authors is Savitri Devi. My favorite book by her is probably 'The Lightning and the Sun', but I love them all in different ways. But personally, the 'Lightning and the Sun' recharged me at a time in my life when things were at their lowest. I adore all of William Pierce's audio recordings and writings. David Lane's 'Damned, Deceived and Defiant', George Lincoln Rockwell's 'This Time the World', without a doubt, required reading is Pierce's 'Hunter' and 'The Turner Diaries', and I love reading about Otto Skorzeny's WWII adventures. I never got creepy chills reading about WWII except from Skorzeny's tale of a lost division on the Eastern Front... cr-e-e-py stuff. Leon Degrelle's books are truly spectacular, read the autobiographies of two of WWII's most interesting pilots: Hans Rudel's 'Stuka Pilot' and Hanna Reisch's 'The Sky My Kingdom', and for some awful truth check out Thomas Goodrich's 'Hellstorm', for a truly interesting view of a Japanese soldier's account of his service in WWII check out the book 'Oba The Last Samurai' by Don Jones, there is also the hero Matt Hale's two books 'Ending White Slavery' and 'The Racial Loyalist Manifesto', 'Twilight over England' by the martyr William Joyce, any books you can find by Waffen-SS veteran Hans Schmidt, gosh it goes on and on.

NSK: Thanks for the interview. Keep up the good work. The victory is ours!

took a bus, and after a journey of many hours I arrived in Germany. I went to the demonstration and did my duty. After a few weeks, when I was in a cafeteria in front of a beautiful Gothic cathedral enjoying my readings, I received a call from my work and another from my neighbors: the police were looking for me. I tried to leave there but in a matter of a short time the police caught up with me since they had my phone geolocated and they cut off the entrances and exits of the town where I was in.

A 1947 law had been applied to me, and for the first time in the modern history of the German federal republic a citizen of the European Union was permanently expelled without the premise of having previously committed a crime or having not even been tried. According to the federal republic it was considered a real threat to the democratic order of the country. A 20-year-old girl considered the greatest danger for one of the strongest countries in Europe? Yes, because they are afraid, they are accustomed to prohibiting and that said prohibition is respected out of fear, but as I signed and swore in my police statement, "My honor is Loyalty." I will fight for Germany, for Europe and for the memory of Adolf Hitler as the first Christians did, with a fanaticism that pushes you to embrace death with a smile on your face. Today the federal republic is working on resources and appeals in the European court of justice to ban me the free mobility through the Schengen territory (a right included in titles 1 and 2 of the treaties of the European Union and of human rights). I wish them luck.

DA: What is your opinion about the political situation in Germany (in its parts: Federal Republic of Germany, Federal Republic of Austria and Luxem-our previous constitution, it has had to be modified. Our legal system must also adapt to the legislation enforced from Brussels. For example, in September a new law for the protection of Judaism was applied in accordance with IHRA. In other words, the European Union is a body foreign to Europe, its particular genius and its ethical system. It is part of the disease.

DA: Speaking of EU: in March 2022 the Spanish police contacted the Federal Republic of Germany (FRG) police regarding your trip to Germany. Then they searched him at the Frankfurt/Main airport, and after that, they took out a legal case due to the alleged "promotion of NS propaganda". This incident made headlines in both Germany and Spain in those days. How did that legal case finally turn out for you?

Isabel Medina Peralta:

I was acquitted and my belongings were returned in September. My lawyer is now fighting for compensation. After that incident I went back in, albeit by bus, and lived for months under the name of "Francesca Rienzi", an Italian art student at the University of Florence. However, the situation became much more complicated after a trip to England, where I was detained at Manchester airport under the anti-terrorist law. After being held for 6 days in the British country without a mobile phone or computer, they left me alone. At that time I traveled to Belgium, from where I would decide my destiny. There was an Interpol search and trace order on me. I knew that I had to go back to my country and wait for the situation to relax. But I had a commitment to my party in Germany and to my comrades and I had to be consistent with what I preach. I Feel free to add some final words to the recipients.

Molly: Thank you comrade! It was fun doing this interview for you. Please send me the web address once it is published and I'll link your website with the interview. Let me just say, to our fellow comrades worldwide: do not get discouraged. Sometimes it is easy to get overwhelmed in our fight. But do not lose faith! With your help our numbers are growing every day. Help us spread the truth, every word is like an arrow into the Darkness and a sword slash to their lies. Our enemy has grown too confident, and this over confidence will be his end. Every disgusting, revolting and evil thing our enemy does brings the normal man closer to us. Never forget: we are in a historic battle of good versus evil. And just like it says in all the religions of the world -- pagan, Christian, Hindu, Muslim -- evil will lose this war, and these horrible, insane days will be just a faded story to tell our grandchildren. The Golden Age we shall usher in with Adolf Hitler's name on our lips...

Isabel Medina Peralta:

Richard Kallergi devised a plan at the beginning of the 1920s. This plan was called "Pan-Europa" and among its maxims we must highlight in literal tenor the following precept "the white races of Europe must be destroyed and replaced by a new breed of Negroid - Eurasians who are docile and easy to dominate." Judaism's vital maxim is to dominate and subjugate the nations of the world to effectuate the word of their God, the control over the world of the "noble race." This "noble" race is not like the African or Mongoloid races, passive, harmless and useful races in the polychromy of natural law, on the contrary, the Jewish race is destructive, parasitic, harmful. In order to exercise total control over a more or less extensive territory, a set of common laws must be created, some global ideological precepts, an identical monetary system. They already did it in Rome, and they tried to proceed that way until an Austrian painter put a stop to it. After, in the Gotterdammerung, Europe had run out of lights, without a guide, and it was time to carry out the plan that Kallergi had already devised. The flag was designed by him (the twelve stars represent the twelve tribes of Israel), his maxims being universalism, consumerism and individualism. The vast majority of countries that have contributed something to the world are dominated; the civilizing peoples, the creative race, under the same symbol and currency subjugated to the dollar transaction and the federal reserve system.

It is true that each country can have its own laws, but according to its constitution they cannot go against the maxims of the European Union. In the case of Spain, being nor European, in an already occupied territory that will remain only as a memory in a history book like that nation that conquered the Americas or wrote Don Quixote. That is what happens today, voraciously, advancing and crushing everything beautiful, leaving the remains of the white, civilizing and creative race to rot in the sun like a corpse. The immigration problem is accompanied by the low birth rate in my country, located within the EU as one of the nations with the lowest birth rate. Spaniards are abandoned to hedonism, to the most absurd individualism or currents such as feminists or homosexual fashions, making the natural regeneration of the racial fabric almost impossible.

On the other hand, the economic precariousness, the lack of infrastructure, the military embarrassment and the control of foreign powers with military bases on our own territory, the lack of a vigorous army and not a roster of sepoys at the service of NATO. All these problems coexist in the shadow of what was once called Spain. But we must go to the essence. The Jew is the one who destabilizes underdeveloped countries and directs the waves of immigration to Europe; he is the one who is in charge of preparing civilized peoples for their invasion with his humanitarian and tolerant verbiage, who deceives women to strip them of their greatest virtue, who distracts man and makes him weak, who destabilizes the economy and creates compound and unnatural interests. That is the problem, removing the control that international Jewry exercises over Spain, suffocating our people to death, civilization would be put back in order. The Jew is to blame.

DA: What is your position regarding the (alleged) European Union (EU)?

Monika Schaefer

Translation of the NS KAMPFRUF interview with Monika Schaefer.

NSK: Please introduce yourself.

Monika Schaefer: I was the fourth of five children, born in 1959 in Edmonton, Canada, to German immigrant parents. School and outside life was in English, but the home-life was very German — we spoke German in the home, had German-Canadian friends, and were culturally immersed in German traditions. Our family went to Germany about every five years on average, to visit our many relatives as well as to see some of the cultural riches, such as magnificent cathedrals, castles and old ruins, not to mention the beautiful countryside of Germany. We stayed very connected to “the old country.”

For most of my adult life, I lived in Jasper, Alberta, where I had the good fortune of working for Parks Canada as a backcountry warden. After my daughter was born, I worked part-time as a violin teacher, as well as performing at weddings and other special functions.

NSK: When did you first start exploring the “Holocaust” topic? Why does this topic still fascinate you?

Monika Schaefer: Compared with some of the great men and women who had been walking a lonely path and pursuing the truth about WW2 since decades, I am a relative new-comer. My brother Alfred and I were quite active in the 9/11 truth movement and had been working hard since 2011 to educate others about that event. In fact it was Alfred who first alerted the rest of our family to the truth about 9/11, and when he did, I was hungry for more. I had already felt some misgivings about that story, and from then on, Alfred and I became a team in pursuing the truth.

I considered myself a peace activist, and I thought that if we simply explain to others what really happened on 9/11, then the ripple effect would be that the wars would end. I was puzzled by the pushback when I presented evidence and truth about 9/11 to my friends and neighbors, but little did I know the magnitude of resistance that would come my way for confronting the Big Lie - the so-called "holocaust".

It was in 2013 that we were urged by a friend to look into the holocaust. At first I resisted, as this was just too big! It was so solidly planted into our very bloodstream, into every fiber of our beings, how could this possibly be a lie!? Alas, when in 2014 I finally did look, it did not take long to realize that this was truly one gigantic hoax. The implications of this lie were enormous. It shaped our whole world. If the holocaust was a hoax, then EVERYTHING we understood about our world was inverted. One can hardly overstate this.

Sometimes my well-meaning (former) friends would say to me when they were witnessing the ritual defamation that I was undergoing in that fairy-tale little town of Jasper, "Monika, why do you concern yourself with something that happened so long ago? That doesn't matter anymore. We have more pressing problems today. Why don't day.

DA: What are the main problems in your country?

Isabel Medina Peralta:

Spain is no longer a sovereign nation, now it is a small part of that conglomerate that makes up the European Union, and even more so, the globalized world. Therefore, Spain's problem does not lie in our own territory but in its subjugation to foreign powers.

In the first place, and as the most important consequence of this serious problem, we find racial supplantation, which, although it is not as pronounced as in London or Paris, is a tangible problem that advances with a destructive pace, threatening the natural order, the polychromy of the world and all the beauty that Spain, as a nation, community and people, could bring to the world. Studies by the National Institute of Statistics reveal that only in Almería can the entry of 58,000 illegal immigrants in small boats be registered. In Barcelona there are already ghettos, suburbs that seem left to their own devices and that are similar to traveling hundreds of kilometers to a nauseating corner of Africa. This can cause the rates of violence, crime or vandalism to increase, but it is not exactly the underlying problem. Wild behavior may well be fixed by deportation. We cannot focus our discourse on this type of conduct, but we must, on the contrary, open our eyes and realize that even the most honest Moroccan will have their five or six children here, that they are born in national territory and will have both Spanish documentation, children which will be able to vote and decide, and they will implement their culture that is neither Spanish

Isabel Medina Peralta:

My answer to this question was already given by Jose Antonio, Primo de Rivera in the early morning of his execution: "I wish that mine were the last Spanish bloodshed in civil strife, I hope that the Spanish people, so rich in good endearing qualities, find peace and a homeland of bread and justice". However, and taking the situation from a practical point of view, the Spanish people have rarely agreed with each other. We lost our empire partly because of the Jewish financing that the English ships received, partly because of internal discord. The cause of the fall of our solar empire is none other than internal disorganization and lack of harmony. Today we can see similarities. The proclamation of the Second Republic was nothing more than the triumph of liberalism and individualism over our people. Sometimes to the left, sometimes to the right. Today we can see these stale and tasteless ideas materialized in the "Partido Popular" and in the PSOE (a party that was already present in the political landscape of those 30s).

Outside of these two strata, each day more homogeneous with each other, we must unite the rest of the ideas and practices. This is how Vox and Podemos arise. Parties similar to the League of Mateo Salvini or AFD in Germany and its consequent opponents. But what about that truly radical left? And that fanatical nationalism that was present in the Falange? There is no place for these parties or ideas in today's democracy. Our era is characterized by a puerile universalism, a total lack of values and ideas, and a fall in collective morality. We must break this situation and transmute these decadent values, for this nothing more needed than fanaticism, and fanaticism is absent to-you put your energy towards the current problems that we could do something about?"

Those remarks made me smile (ironically), because the two positions are contradictory. On the one hand, the holocaust is not relevant to the present, and on the other hand, anyone who questions the official narrative must be shut down, persecuted, and jailed. Those two positions just do not add up. I tried to explain this to them, and asked them the simple question, "if it was so irrelevant now, why do they go after little old me so hard?!". And my dear brother Alfred — why is he in jail if the "holocaust" was no longer relevant? Obviously the holocaust story still is important.

The thing about the holocaust lie is that, once exposed, the big JQ is out in the open. That really is what this is all about, the Jewish Question. It is the why-and-how we connect the dots.

NSK: Could the "Holocaust" topic be considered as some kind of a political agenda? If yes, why? What is the goal of this agenda? Who benefits from it?

Monika Schaefer: This really is the key question! There is absolutely no doubt that the story about the so-called holocaust is central to the political structure of our world. Without the holocaust, what are the Jews? Ask any Jew what defines them, what is central to their identity, and they will talk about the holocaust. The holocaust epitomizes the Jewish notion that they are the persecuted people and that this has always been so. Jewish victims versus aggressor Gentiles.

Jewish Power resides in their feigned victimhood and in their ability to stop us from questioning their central narrative. The holocaust story paints the Germans with a cloak of permanent guilt. Germany must forever pay back — money, protection, reparations — to the Jews for having allegedly tried to exterminate them. We must never criticize the Jews, nor criticize government policies which lead to our self-destruction, such as, for example, mass immigration from third-world countries. That would be “racist” and will lead to the next holocaust! Terms such as “anti-Semitic” are used as weapons to shut down any factual reporting on Jewish activities, no matter how criminal and no matter the evidence. Their false story and tactics make the Jews beyond reproach.

The holocaust narrative is essential to the very existence of Israel.

Why they protect their holocaust narrative so fiercely is because when the truth becomes known to the wider public — and that is happening fast — then their whole house of cards of lies, deceit, subversion, and destruction comes tumbling down. The Jews will once again be driven out of their positions of power and control. Thus, I believe that exposing the holocaust lie is essential for our very survival.

NSK: How does the political agenda of the “Holocaust” affect Western societies (mainly the German)?

Monika Schaefer: Germany has been brought down to her knees because of the holocaust story. Most people who lived through the war have died by now, but imagine first ideological differences, since I was a “soil blue” according to my party comrades (a metaphor for the brown shirt). The blue shirt was the partyshirt and represents the serious and proletarian spirit of the working class, and I decided to wear it in the speech, first of all, due to the well-founded principle of uniformity, because in an atrium or in the last row, I am one more soldier and I do not deserve distinctions of any kind. Secondly, because under the Wehrmacht uniform of the Falangist soldiers peeked that blue that reminds our nation and its glorious history, as their hymn says “glory to the homeland that knew how to follow the path of the sun over the blue of the sea”, conquering the whole world.

Even so, my doctrine is purely national socialist and I only obey the orders of the gods or of Hitler, so any new party that wants to shed or “dilute” its essence as if it were bad, any “fourthpolitical theory” is presented to me as an ideological transgression and a very serious fault for dishonor towards the gods.

DA: Personally, I think that the background of the Spanish Civil War 1936-1939 is a good example of the situation in which all the countries of the Western world find themselves today, and for that reason alone it also seems to me a pity that the history of the Civil War Spanish Civil is still rare for many people outside of Spain. - What is your opinion regarding this topic? Do you think that the circumstances of the massive political tensions between the left and the right that have later provoked the Spanish Civil War are (in any way) similar to the current situation in the western world?

They speculate on the misery of the people, they embed harmful ideas in the national organism like parasites: yesterday communism, today anti-racism, feminism or LGBTBI. They are parasites, and parasites must first be identified as such in order to proceed to find a cure. Sometimes the difficult thing is to be honest with ourselves, we know it, we know how dangerous the Jewish problem is. However, we prefer to look the other way and distract others with affectionate euphemisms such as "the elite" "the chosen people"...No! I don't care about the consequences, I live for honor, not for bread and I would never regret proclaiming the truth, no matter how difficult my circumstances have become after that, I would repeat it a thousand times more. I started studying the Jewish question since I started studying the world. Everywhere your eyes reached you found a Jew: the press, banks, energy companies, oil... studying universal history you notice the casual detail that from Egypt to the Roman praetor, passing through Caesars, Russian tsars, Romanians, English, Spanish or French conquerors, you found an episode of expulsion towards the Jew. Analyze the facts without ideological prejudices, remove the blindfold and you discover only one name "The Jew".

DA: So how would you define your political views in total? Are you Falangist in orientation, or more in the direction of Francisco Franco's position?

Isabel Medina Peralta:

I am a National Socialist. First I started my political career in the Falange because of my devotion to Ramiro Ledesma Ramos and in gratitude for the sacrifice of José Antonio and our fallen. In the new Falange I had many the trauma of having your country devastated by bombs, including the deliberate terror-bombing of cities where the express target was civilians, and then imagine that you are not allowed to grieve those losses because you are told a fantastical story about what your countrymen did to the Jews - gassed 6 million of them and turned their skin into lampshades, rendered their fat into soap and made grotesque shrunken heads too! Imagine also that you are not even allowed to know how many of your people were killed in these bombings or in the post-war death camps. Imagine then that the next several generations of school children are taught about the alleged horrors that their parents and grandparents did to the Jews, while the horrors that were done to your own people are diminished and dismissed, with the attitude that they deserved what they got anyway.

Germans are so weakened by the guilt cult about the imaginary "holocaust", that they can be completely ruled and manipulated by the hidden hand of government. Who is this hidden hand? Those who brought us the false narrative in the first place! It is a perfectly evil playbook. Accuse your victim of doing that to you what you have done to them. Cui bono? Those who forever cry "poor me, poor persecuted me" while they stab their victim in the back.

Why would the Jews not celebrate upon learning that less of their ancestors died than they originally proclaimed? It should be cause for joy and relief, but instead it makes them very angry. I find this very strange, other than the fact that they benefit greatly from the story of 6 million dead.

It is not only the Germans who are guilty of imagined crimes. The rest of the white race is guilty too, because they allegedly did not do enough to stop the holocaust from happening. In addition, we are taught that the white race is guilty of all the other evils of the world. Study the high school social studies curriculum in Canada, where I live, and you will wonder that the white children don't all commit suicide by the end of the school year. It is nothing but guilt, guilt, guilt! Slavery, colonization, native mass graves, on and on it goes. You can search long and hard for any lessons about European culture, architecture, traditions, music, or anything that puts European history in a positive light. The teaching of classical music is now considered racist. Math is considered racist. Basic truth is now racist.

The lack of pride in one's own culture goes hand in hand with the guilt cult. It is another intended consequence of the false narrative about the "bad Nazis" and the "holocaust". How best to kill a culture than to make the children be ashamed of their parents and grandparents. They will be only too eager to absorb the "popular culture" from Hollywood and other mass media, in the vacuum left behind after shedding the traditions and culture of their shameful ancestors. That is cultural genocide, pure and simple.

NSK: Please describe your political views.

Monika Schaefer: My political views have changed 180 degrees since I woke up about what is really going on in the world. I was very active in the Watermelon Party — sorry — I mean the Green Party, which really is the communist party. Watermelons are green on the outside and tween Carlists, Fascists, Conservatives, Liberals and Catholics and, while it was believed that Hitler would win the war by advancing his first positions, he was a supporter of the Führer. They came to meet in Hendaye and Hitler declared that "he would prefer to have his teeth pulled out one by one before meeting Franco again."

Then came the twilight of the gods, and under the ruins of Berlin everything beautiful, harmonious, just and true succumbed. In Spain the fascist salute was eliminated as official, the "camisas viejas" of the Falange were attacked and eliminated, changing them for technocrats, and they ended up agreeing with Zionism by installing military bases in Spain in exchange for money, in the purest style of low prostitution, If judged from an ideological point of view...

DA: In your speech about the "Blue Division", you also mentioned the international Jewish influence. I must say, I'm quite impressed by that, since it's not common to see so clearly at such a young age regarding this particular topic, also, and that's not an age thing, it's hard these days to talk about the influence of Jews in public, especially within the EU. Describe to our readers how you have learned about the Jewish problem.

Isabel Medina Peralta:

It's hard, I know, but it is essentially necessary. Man needs to know what the problem is, he needs to give it a shape, a face, a name. The name of the problem is Judaism, international Jewry and its total contempt for other peoples and for the harmonious arrangement of things.

all fighting for a common idea and that we are all insignificant compared to that idea. In addition, this is how the Spanish soldiers fought, blue shirt next to the swastika, the symbol of resurgent life.

DA: Unfortunately Franco did not officially join the Axis. What do you think was their intention behind this decision, and do you think an alliance could have affected the Axis war efforts in a significant way?

Isabel Peralta:

In the early 1930s, a new spirit began to take shape, identical to the spirit that was already sweeping the souls of young people throughout Europe. This movement was founded by Ramiro Ledesma Ramos, editor and general secretary of “La conquista del Estado”.

Later he joined with José Antonio's Falange, less combative, more moderate, more Catholic than German. Naturally this led to a split soon after. However, both Ledesma and José Antonio reached the stratum of leaders of fascism in Spain. When the civil war broke out, all the leaders and officials of the Falange and JONS were imprisoned and shot. In the case of José Antonio, the possibility that Franco had to save him is striking, and he renounced the release proposal.

Franco, a strategist, educated in the highest military rigor, was not at all interested in the lives of these leaders, because he knew that with them his figure was eclipsed and worthless. After winning the war, he seized the Falange, its symbols, its doctrine (at least in theory) and its anthem. He merged the party creating an ideological cocktail bered on the inside, hence the euphemism. The packaging of the party is beautiful, but the reality is something else entirely.

Everything I thought the Green Party stood for — their six core principles: ecological wisdom, social justice, respect for diversity, non-violence, sustainability, and participatory democracy — meshed well with my own values. Once I righted myself back up in this upside-down world, I realized that everything was inverted. For example, “respect for diversity” is code for killing diversity. I had thought it was all about nature and protecting biodiversity, but in reality it is about mixing up all the different peoples and races, and ultimately annihilating all the races, but especially the white race.

Another example of how the Green Party has it all wrong in their fight to protect the environment, is that they push the mistaken notion that carbon is bad. Carbon happens to be the basis of life, so in their drive to decarbonize our environment (“fight global warming / climate change”) they are actually attacking life itself. I have yet to hear the Green Party take on the issue of chemical trails and geoengineering as the real culprit of “climate change”. When they finally admit to the spraying, they say it is to “save the planet”. It is all lies, lies, lies.

One former friend accuses me of having changed, and that she does not recognize me anymore. I tell her that my values have NOT changed and that I am still me. But what has changed is my understanding of reality and my view of the world. She laments that I formerly cared about the same things she cares so much about: nature and the environment. I tell her that I care more than ever about nature, about life, about everything that makes this earth, our sacred home, so beautiful. It is my love for what is beautiful, and my understanding of what is at stake if our eternal enemy is successful in destroying all, that makes me fight harder than ever. Our very existence is at stake!

So you see, my former friend thinks I do not care anymore about the environment, when in fact she is the one who is deceived into thinking that she is doing good, but is actually supporting anti-life policies.

NSK: What is your opinion regarding Adolf Hitler and the Third Reich?

Monika Schaefer: For most of my life, I believed that Adolf Hitler was the most evil man that ever walked the face of the earth, just like the majority of other people in Western Nations believe(d) this. That had been so drilled into us, hammered into us, drip-fed into us in a steady stream of programming, from school, from movies, magazines, radio, books, virtually through every possible means. Hitler and "the Nazis" were invoked as a synonym for any and all evil, right to this very day, in fact more so now than ever!

Even when I began to learn the truth about Adolf Hitler and the Third Reich, and even after I realized that this man was the most lied about man in history, it still took some time before the residual contamination of the lies washed away. It took a while before I could see him presented in a positive light without cringing. Thank goodness, that revulsion has finally been replaced with reverence, respect and love for a man whom I now believe to have been one of the greatest men to walk the face of this

In the speech I began by paraphrasing Adolf Hitler in a pronouncement about the glorious feat of the Spanish division, and then I urged the comrades of our century to despise the consequences, because a fine, a small jail sentence or that your girlfriend leaves you because you're a "Nazi", none of these small circumstances compare to those who gave their lives for our cause. As I already said:

"Those who survived the cold of the Russian steppe and the fire of Krasny Bor went back to challenge providence in Berlin, together with the Charlemagne unit, together with the SS, for defending what would be a thousand years of greatness and glory."

Death was not the end for them, it was the beginning of an era, the Hitlerist era, and today we must fight as they already did, "in each of our acts we must make the revolution a presence, even if death comes to us; for in that case we will die under the sun or under the stars, but our blood will become fertile as a rejuvenated spring".

Lastly, I stressed the vital need to fight against the father of all corruption, against the lord of the world, the instigator of immigration, of moral degeneration, of the financial crisis, because: "It is our supreme obligation to fight for Europe and for Spain, now weak and liquidated by the enemy, the enemy that will always be the same although with different masks: the Jew. Because nothing is more certain than this affirmation, the Jew is to blame."

I wore a Falangist shirt for the principle of uniformity. Even if it was me out of all the attendees who raised my voice or took the microphone, nothing distinguishes me from my comrades. The blue shirt reminds us that we are

I really can't explain why I was there, barely eighteen years old, in a pantheon consecrated to heroes and in front of 300 people with a microphone. I was more or less known in Spain because my behavior, and my contempt for the consequences made a girl a political soldier equal to men. For example, when I was fifteen years old, many hooligans from a British anti-fascist team came to Madrid. While my friends were thinking and deciding on strategies, I decided to stand before them and carry out one of my own ideas, which was successful considering that those anti-fascists were humiliated by a single little girl. Also, taking into account my personality and physical appearance, leads me to think that certain organizations decided to give me a voice at demonstrations to attract a renewed audience and give a new, less aggressive media image. However, that day the "propaganda decision" got a little out of hand. With my speech I wanted to awaken in all those men the martial and ethical character of the divisional soldiers, I wanted to exalt the virtuosity of the Spanish warrior and his history and above all I wanted the wind to make the echo of my words rumble, shaking the cypresses of the cemetery. Telling the indisputable truth, the unchanging voice of history that is dying in our days and few dare to point a finger at the enemy. I believe that half measures, that ideological transgression in favor of acquiring a better opinion of a corrupt society, will never lead anywhere, never. I think that someone has to sacrifice their privileges for the community and honestly I don't mind doing it, because doing my duty is the most important thing for a man with honor. Above all, I tried to make the militants aware that life is worthless if you are not capable of sacrificing it to an immense ideal.

earth. When everything has been reversed in an Orwellian world, it makes sense that this great man and his great accomplishments have been turned into the complete opposite, by the peddlers of mainstream thinking.

My acquisition of knowledge about National Socialism and the Third Reich began after my awakening about the Big 6-million Lie, and so it is relatively new for me. As I learn more about it, I feel increasingly aligned with National Socialist values. Let me share a little story that relates to those values.

Sometime in late 2016, a few months after my "Sorry Mom, I was wrong about the holocaust" video was released, I received an invitation to speak to a group of people in Calgary Alberta. I had already done some speaking engagements across Canada, and so this was nothing new. I had met the organizer of the Calgary event, but knew nothing about their formal organization, not even the name of it, nor did it occur to me to ask if they even had an organization. I simply understood that this young man, the organizer, was aware of the deceptions, and he wanted me to speak to them about my experiences.

Within a few days of accepting the invitation, I received two separate phone calls from alarmed acquaintances in Jasper warning me that I should rethink this speaking engagement and I should not go there! They said it sounded "dangerous". I was bewildered how they even knew about it. I learned that Vice Magazine out of Toronto had reported on the upcoming event, and now everyone in Jasper knew about it. Wow! What a lot of busy-bodies in Jasper. I knew nothing about Vice, but evidently it was a leftist, Jew-controlled publication, and Jasper was obviously tapped in to that network.

It was through those 2 phone calls that I learnt the name of the Calgary organization: Blood and Honor. Okay, no big deal, right? For me, there was no Pavlovian response with that name, as I was not even familiar with it. But to the alarmed individuals who called me, that name Blood and Honor sent them into a panic. To them, it meant pure evil.

Needless to say, I ignored their pleadings not to attend that “dangerous” meeting. I can truly say that I never felt safer than amongst the mostly young men, some women and children, and a few older folks who attended the meeting at their club house in Calgary. They were respectful, polite, bright and engaging. It was one of the best audiences I ever had. These were people who had ideals and morals, they were pro-family and were upright citizens. They also understood that we were being lied to about our history. They knew quite a lot about National Socialism, in fact more than I did at the time. That is why I share this story. If those people liked National Socialism, then I wanted to learn more about National Socialism.

If those words “Blood and Honor” were so dangerous to the leftists, the Jews, and the rest of the indoctrinated masses who were still immersed in our inverted world, well then maybe there was something very important about Blood and about Honor. Indeed, there is nothing more important than our blood. And our honor will be restored once we know the truth about who we are. That is what our enemy fears the most, hence the inversion — yes those Blood and Honor values are dangerous — but to in Madrid from the pandemic in a climate of political controversy, social injustice and economic crisis, which of course was conducive to the premature growth of the group. However, it lacked a firm command, a concrete ideological determination and prospects for the future. When I decided to join the party, I clearly saw that it did not have anykind of lasting application in the Spanish social scene and that it itself had to serve merely as an action group to stir consciences, achieving echoes in the media through determined actions. In this sense, we met our objectives, since the group was mentioned even in the national parliament. Later, the behavioral problems of certain people, the indiscipline and inconsistency of many militants, added to the legal problems that our public appearances caused, caused disappointment to crush the fighting spirit of our soldiers. I left the party a month before its dissolution due to differences with one of the leaders, since I was in Germany without the possibility of being able to make decisions from my own country due to dangerous circumstances. My decision was made based on the fact that the future of the group and its directors were far from my ideological thinking and my combative ethics.

DA: You first approached the public giving a speech on February 13, 2021 in Madrid about the World War II Spanish Falangist Volunteer Division “Azul” (“Spanish Volunteer Division”), wearing the blue Falangist shirt. This speech has raised a lot of controversy, even on an international scale. - Explain to our readers your motivation behind this speech and your decision to appear there in the Falangist uniform.

career by founding a Jonsista weekly paper, that is to say, attached to the national socialist line within Spanish fascism. The name it took was "La Conquista del Estado" by virtue of the weekly paper that began the fascist political struggle in Spain in 1931 under the pen of Ramiro Ledesma Ramos. After the publication of my issues I began to meet comrades, some readers and others who joined the project. When I met who is now my most loyal comrade and best friend, I began a period of militancy in the Falange with him, but years after I gave myself up to the party I was able to verify that the current social circumstances dragged the essence of the party until making it unrecognizable to anyone of its own founders. So, I started a fight in "Bastion Frontal", a premature youth group whose main objective was none other than to shake public consciousness based on viral media actions. After its dissolution I find myself reading and preparing the new steps on a solid and unbreakable structure for the future. Nevertheless, I participate and fight together with Spanish comrades in a cultural association and internationally, both in my party "Der Dritte Weg", in Germany, and in the British magazine "Heritage and Destiny", in which I collaborate with articles on a regular basis. I also maintain contact and collaboration with certain parties in Brazil, France and Italy.

DA: Are you still linked to "Bastion Frontal"? If so, please tell our readers something about the history of the mentioned organization and its goals.

Isabel Medina Peralta:

Bastión Frontal was a youth militant organization based on the idea of political struggle and street action. It arose whom?! It is what the Jews fear the most — our White Race!

NSK: Did you ever meet other "Holocaust"-related historians such as David Irving, Ernst Zündel, Fred Leuchter, Germar Rudolf, Gerd Honsik etc.? If yes, please describe them to our recipients.

Monika Schaefer: I have not met any of those people you mentioned in person, but I have had the pleasure of speaking on the telephone and on radio shows with Fred Leuchter. What an honorable man! There is so much more to Fred than just his work on gas chambers. It was a stroke of luck for Ernst Zündel that the one and only gas chamber expert in the whole entire United States (the country that actually did employ gassing as one method of execution) turned out to be a man with such integrity and good character. It was the preeminent French Professor Robert Faurisson whose idea it was to send Fred Leuchter to Auschwitz to examine the facilities which had allegedly been used to gas millions of people, for the purposes of testifying at Ernst Zündel's 1988 "holocaust trial" in Toronto.

Fred Leuchter went over as a holocaust believer, and this concerned Robert Faurisson. But Ernst Zündel's confidence that Fred Leuchter would report accurately on what he found superseded any hesitation about Leuchter's testimony being tainted by his then-held belief system. As it turned out, Leuchter came away from Auschwitz with the solid conviction that not a single person was ever murdered by gas at the camps. He testified on what he found. Then he too, found out that there is a personal price to pay for telling the truth about the gas chambers. He was smear, lied about, defamed, arrested, jailed, and lost all employment... but he stays strong to this day.

I have also had the pleasure of speaking with Germar Rudolf over the telephone, but that was a few years back. I have the greatest respect and admiration for Germar's work. He is the quintessential 'fleißig' German man, diligently writing and publishing articles and books, and keeping up websites. Germar also paid the price as a political prisoner in Germany, after which he moved to the USA.

NSK: You are head of the international society "Truth and Justice for Germans".

Please describe the circumstances of its foundation, its goals, the kind of work and your personal work there.

Monika Schaefer: The Truth and Justice for Germans Society was started by a group of dedicated people in Vancouver, Canada, in 2014. I only came into it much later. The group wanted to have a public face and spokesperson at the helm, and since I had been incarcerated for having reached the "wrong" conclusions about WW2 history, my name was definitively in the public eye. So I was invited to become president of the society, which I accepted in February of 2020.

The name of the Society speaks for itself. The goal is to tell the truth about Germany's history, dispel the myths about German villainy, celebrate German culture and traditions, and tell the other side of the story - the true side. Germany has been slandered non-stop by the All-Lies

Isabel Medina Peralta:

I began my dedication to politics in an active way at the age of thirteen. It was at that moment that I began to appreciate the training and cultural capacity of a person, so I set out to read everything I considered useful. Although my first readings versed on philosophy, all roads lead to Rome, and in this case led to a grounded and practical political ideology. My actions, my way of behaving, my tastes and appreciations are, and have been for as long as I can remember, fascist.

At the age of fourteen I began to attend conferences and demonstrations, shortly after I founded a magazine for political information and outreach, and I began to notice the transmutation in my life choice. But all the problems that my political affiliation caused me seemed foolish, the enemy didn't know that I fought for greatness and immortality! The will of unravelling chaos, to put the deranged world back in order, and to act as a guardian in the highest Platonic sense of order, that is the pressing task that National Socialism has set itself; and it is the task that I have also set myself. My motivation is to act for the preservation of beauty and harmony, to act by virtue and situate art in the vital maxim of the center of the universe.

DA: Did you/do you cooperate with political parties and/or organizations within Spain and/or even internationally?

Isabel Medina Peralta:

Yes. As I have mentioned previously, I began my political Translation “Der Angriff” interview with nationalist activist Isabel Medina Peralta from Spain.

DA: Please introduce yourself.

Isabel Medina Peralta:

I am, above all, a National Socialist. I am a political soldier doing his duty. I understand that a man (in my case, a woman) is defined by his actions, by his particular way of understanding the world and presenting himself in it. The path I have chosen is the path of action. “I believe, I fight”, this is the categorical imperative of my existence.

DA: When did you start your political work and what was your motivation for doing so?

side, and the “re-education” program has driven Germany to slander herself. The war never really ended.

Truth will ultimately lead to Justice.

Educational articles and videos can be found at the society’s website truthandjusticeforgermans.com.

NSK: Do you plan any further projects for the future?

Monika Schaefer: I have been trying to write a book about my “adventures”. Somehow it always takes a back seat to all the other things going on in life. It is on the back burner, so to speak. Maybe one day it will get done.

But in the meantime, my biggest and most urgent goal is to wake people up — connect the dots — about what is going on in the world, especially right now with the fraudulent “vaccines” in a fake pandemic. War is being waged against us, not a conventional war with bombs, rather a war by deception. We need to stop this! We truly face an existential threat, as our eternal enemy is trying to carry out massive genocide with the poisonous injection, weather warfare, mass immigration/invasion and general breakdown of society.

How can we win this war, if so many of our people do not even understand that we are in a war, and secondly, if the people do not recognize the enemy within the gates? The perpetrators of this gigantic Covid fraud are the same as the perpetrators of the biggest fraud up to now — the holocaust lie. Until ten years ago, I believed their lies. If I was able to wake up, then others can too.

NSK: “Holocaust“-related – scientific (!) - work has been suppressed harder and harder within the last decades, often in complete violation of the official laws of the particular countries, besides the open violation of international laws (UN-Declaration of Human Rights, 49, CCPR/C/GC/34). You suffered by this repression of the hypercritical democratic regimes already personally.

Please describe the very beginning of this repression and its effects, which you have experienced because of your work, and your opinion regarding such actions of the democratic regimes against freedom of speech.

Monika Schaefer: It is true, that repression and suppression of the truth has increased over the decades. In Germany where I became a political prisoner, the holocaust denial law in the German Criminal Code Section 130 was only introduced in 1994. The word “holocaust” does not even appear in the law, but it is nonetheless known as the “holocaust denial law”. Lobbyists had fought hard for many years to make holocaust denial a crime in Germany. There was great resistance, but finally the Jewish lobby won. Holocaust denial can earn you 5 years imprisonment in Germany. An additional clause was added in 2005, whereby “approving of, glorifying or justifying” National Socialist rule can earn you 3 years imprisonment. In other words, it is strictly verboten to say anything good about that time period in Germany.

In Canada we have “hate speech” laws, Section 319 of the CCC (Criminal Code of Canada). They say that “hate speech” is excluded from the concept of freedom of white woman and mother, for Sweden, her fatherland and all of the North.

In closing, I would like to thank Tina for her time, from woman to woman. She is more than just a Weggefährtin. Women like her deserve to be called pioneers.

the motto “What I can do, you can do too.” That’s why she appears on the organisation’s radio shows, talks to Swedes on the streets during public activities and tries to understand why so few women are interested in political activism.

Being a mother herself, she asks herself the same question again and again:

How can someone just descend into passivity and comfort and leave a worse world to their children? We are the last generation who can change something. After us, it’s up to our children, and it will be more difficult for them than us. Activism on the streets is just a small part of our work. We have members who prefer to work behind the scenes for personal reasons, but they still contribute to an essential part of the whole. There is no reason not to be active!

Tina rightly accuses those women who wander around blindly, entrenched in the morbid Bolshevik Zeitgeist, while spending their time marketing their “individual” personalities on Instagram, Facebook etc.

But in Sweden there are a few (both men and women) who take matters into their own hands and do not shy away from standing out from the masses. They come from all walks of life and have found their way to the organisation in their own ways, whether they are women who have been harassed by “new Swedes”, youths who are sick of unhealthy additives and ruthless factory farming and have found the path to a more natural lifestyle via an article by the Resistance Movement, or the man who wants to drop off his wife and children in the evening with a clear conscience.

Tina knows that her movement makes a difference and she is proud of being a part of the whole – fighting as a speech, because... “hate speech is different!” they will screech. The Canadian law makes it illegal “to communicate statements publicly that might incite hatred against an identifiable group”. Who determines what is defined as “hate” and who is this identifiable group against whom one might incite hatred when you tell the truth about them — so sorry — I mean when you speak “hate”. Furthermore, how can we and why do we legislate emotions?

(I think I may have misunderstood the question at first, and thought you were asking about the laws. But nonetheless, that is just a bit of background about Germany’s and Canada’s laws which have led to the creation of political prisoners.)

Here is what happened to me, in very brief summary:

In June of 2016 I made the videos “Sorry Mom, I was wrong about the holocaust”, and in German “Entschuldigung Mama, ich hatte Unrecht was den Holocaust betrifft”. I was visiting my brother Alfred in Germany at the time, and so he was able to produce the videos with his videography equipment.

I knew at the time that I was going through a one-way door. It felt exhilarating because I knew I was telling the truth, and yet it was such a taboo subject. The speed with which events unfolded took my breath away. The video went viral, comments poured in - first the good, then the bad. Long-time friends emailed me their termination of our friendship.

Back home in the little town of Jasper, Canada, I learned what Ritual Defamation is. I could write a book about just that, but suffice it to say that this was mob mentality at its worst and the mob wanted to burn the witch at the stake. What gave me strength was my innermost knowledge that I had truth on my side, plus I received moral support from new contacts the world over who were witnessing the storm from afar.

In December 2017 I made a quick decision to visit Alfred in Germany for Christmas. January 3rd, 2018 we attended the trial of Sylvia Stolz in Munich. I wanted to meet this heroine and I was also intensely curious about what a speech crime trial looked like (oh the irony!). It was there that the authorities spotted me in the public gallery, and promptly arrested me. They held me on remand because of “flight risk”. Finally after six months waiting, the trial against Alfred and me began on July 2, and continued over the span of nearly four months. Alfred was taken from his home on July 6, jailed prior to any conviction because of the “severity of the crime” and their fear that he might flee the country. The trial concluded on October 26, 2018, at which time I was released on a 10 months sentence “time served”. Alfred remains in jail to this day.

Thus it was that the one-month trip turned into nearly a year when I was arrested and jailed and tried and convicted for telling the truth — they worded the part about telling the truth slightly differently.

If there is only one thing that people should know about a speech crime trial in Germany, it is this: evidence and testimony which support the conclusions of the defendant are illegal. If anyone is under the illusion that court is a place where you can present your arguments and your evidence in order to defend yourself, you are mistaken! Doing so sistance while uniting family and activism. Because the fight for the fatherland is not a gender issue, as the Swedes say, but a responsibility that every one of us has.

Thus this extraordinary woman found her place in the Nordic Resistance Movement around five years ago. I asked if her children are marginalised at school:

“No, not at all,” said Tina. “Many of the children think it’s cool their classmates’ mum is in the Resistance Movement.”

She doesn’t have any problems with the other parents either. In the small Swedish town where she lives, she is accepted.

Today Tina leads her own group within the Nordic Resistance Movement and has the respect from her comrades that she earned via her many years of activism. She is especially proud of the women in the organisation, who don’t just support the men but are also active in the everyday work of the movement. Public leafleting, putting up placards or being on the catering team at events – everyone contributes according to their abilities.

Those who cannot be active publicly can contribute in other ways, with one example being the Swedish-language podcast made for and by women – Radio Regeringen.

The question of role assignment within the Nordic Resistance Movement can quickly be explained in one sentence: The right person in the right place. Everyone has their duties, according to their strengths and interests, regardless of whether they are male or female. Tina says there is only exception: “On demonstrations, the men hold the shields. We want to convey traditional ideals because we stand for traditional values.”

Tina also sees her leadership as a possibility. By being a role model for other women, she gives them the courage to stand up against the modern Zeitgeist – encapsulated in was only right that the article also served to give a personal insight into the life of a woman who in all respects has devoted herself to the struggle for folk and nation in an inspirational way. She offers direct, thought-provoking words, anecdotes from the field that inspire courage, and truths requiring no discussion.

I realised that Tina was a special woman over a year ago when I met her at a Nordic Resistance Movement demonstration in Stockholm. She has an open, warm manner and had much to relate about political difficulties, social change and the slow but certain re-education of her people that has taken place in recent decades.

Tina's way of thinking has always been very traditional, or natural, as she calls it. For her, National Socialism is the most natural way of life – preservation of the blood and preservation of the Nordic culture are fundamental. As is often the case, this led to an interest in seeking and maintaining contact with those who share her ideals.

Her activism was sparked by the first wave of migration from the Balkans in the early 1990s. In the 1994 election she became politically active in the Sweden Democrats, who at that time still had nationalist values and goals, but during the succeeding years would be increasingly transformed into a system-controlled, liberal cesspit.

The struggle for her country drove her further, and in 1998 she joined the National Socialist Front as a political activist and earned respect and recognition among her mostly male party comrades.

When her children were born, things were quieter for a few years for the energetic Tina. She dedicated herself to her role as a mother and embraced the most beautiful time in a woman's life. But as the political changes in Sweden showed no signs of abating, she decided it was time for a new challenge: a return to the front for the national re-will garner more charges against you. Sylvia Stolz found that out, and so did many others, including my brother Alfred.

Here is another surprise: try to acquire a transcript of the proceedings of the 2018 Schaefer siblings trial in Germany, and you will fail. It does not exist. There was no recording, and no stenographer. Hence, no transcript.

NSK: Please describe the current legal situation you are in.

Monika Schaefer: I have no ongoing legal situation related to this story, other than that my name is flagged whenever I cross any border. I experienced that on the two occasions that I travelled to the USA since my return from Germany in late 2018. Once was at the Calgary airport on my return from New York. I was detained for 3 hours, and four of my books were stolen by the Canadian Border Services Agency. The second incidence took place at a land crossing in southeast British Columbia entering the USA. I was detained, questioned about being arrested, my car was thoroughly searched, and just when I had mentally prepared myself that I would be turned back, they finally told me to go through and "have a nice day".

NSK: What about your brother Alfred?

Monika Schaefer: Alfred sits in the jail to this day. Were it not for the additional charges that were made against him simply for things he said and did in court during our trial in 2018, he would have been released by now. He has been in jail now just over 40 months, and his original sentence was 38 months. In 2019, he faced new charges resulting directly from his words spoken in defense during our trial. The judge had interrupted Alfred many times, warning him that if he continued speaking along those lines, that more charges would have to be laid, as this talk was illegal!

Alfred always answered, “You want to put me in jail for six million years anyway, and I am just telling the truth. I will keep talking.”

Since the 3rd of December 2020, Alfred has been held in solitary confinement, only let out of his cell for his daily 60 minutes fresh air in the court yard. The reason for solitary confinement is that he insists on breathing freely, without a face diaper covering his nose.

Alfred is supposed to be released in July of 2022, however there are more charges pending against him. He was supposed to be in court again a few months ago (summer of 2021), this time for showing his cohorts how high his dog Pavlov can jump, with a gesture that they also call the “Hitler Salute”. This straight arm gesture evidently creates much fear in the occupiers of Germany. Because of Alfred’s mask defiance, they postponed the court date because the judge was not willing to be in the same room with an unmasked prisoner. I am not aware of a new date having been set.

NSK: In times of overwhelming censorship, it is necessary to keep up a continuous information campaign (like Dr. Joseph Goebbels said: „The truth can’t be spoken out often enough!“).

Tina Lund

In conversation with Tina Lund from the Nordic Resistance Movement the German Social Nationalist organisation Der Dritte Weg recently conducted an interview with Tina Lund from the Nordic Resistance Movement.

The conversation covered topics such as her history of activism and women’s wider role in the struggle.

The below interview with Tina Lund was conducted by a woman from our German cooperation organisation Der Dritte Weg as part of their monthly column “Die Weggefährtin” [Fellow Traveller], which focuses on interviews with nationalist women.

The original aim of this article was to give an insight into the structure of the Nordic Resistance Movement, with emphasis on the work of its women. After a detailed interview with Tina, and some private words afterwards, it

There is no documentary evidence for an order nor a plan nor a budget to exterminate the Jews. Raul Hilberg, a leading exterminationist aka “holocaust historian”, said that there must have been an “incredible meeting of minds, a consensus-mind reading by a far-flung bureaucracy” in place of an order to exterminate the Jews.

NSK: Do you want to recommend some literature regarding this topic to the recipients?

Monika Schaefer: Where do I begin? There are many good resources. Germar Rudolf has published the Holocaust Handbook series. Go to holocausthandbooks.com to order books there. codoh.com also has many resources.

The book by Benton Bradbury called The Myth of German Villainy is a must read! If you only read one book, that is what I would recommend.

Robert Faurisson is no longer with us, but his website is still up, with many articles in French and in English at robertfaurisson.blogspot.com.

NSK: Dear Monika, it was a pleasure to do this interview with you. Your work is precious, and it's a blessing, that there are still people who fight the evil lies which stains the whole German people since 1945!

Thanks for the interview. Keep up the good work. The victory is ours! Feel free to add some final words to the recipients.

Monika Schaefer: Thank you so very much for inviting me to do this. It was my pleasure!

Please explain the facts regarding so called „mass gas-sings“, „gas chambers“ and “Zyklon B“, especially the truth about the so called „death camps“.

Monika Schaefer: The simplest way to deal with this question is with the declaration by the 34 French professors and historians, which was published by France’s newspaper of record Le Monde on 21 February 1979:

“One must not ask oneself how, technically, such a mass-murder was possible. It was technically possible, since it happened. That is the requisite starting point of any historical inquiry into the subject. It is incumbent upon us to state this truth simply: there is not, there cannot be any debate on the existence of the gas chambers.”

That is it. No debate, no discussion, no evidence required. Actually the professors did us a favor because they surely know the truth and now we need not bother with pesky details. Joking aside, they really did do us a favor by illustrating that they have no evidence for their story, and that it really was a technical impossibility, or they would not need to make such an absurd, illogical declaration. Their “requisite starting point” is exactly how the story of the holocaust is handled, in the media, in the schools, in the museums, and worst of all, in the courts!

As an illustration of that, one need only look at what Articles 19 and 21 of the Nuremberg trials said. Paraphrasing briefly, evidence is not required for something that is self-evident and is common knowledge. The holocaust was common knowledge and did not need evidence. That was the starting point. Trials have been mostly a sham ever since.

There is a good reason why Jewish holocaust historians such as Debra Lipstadt tell the public that we should never debate a holocaust denier. It is because they will always lose. The facts and evidence do not support the official narrative. That is why facts and evidence are forbidden in court.

Many excellent books, articles and documentaries exist which tell the truth about what happened and did not happen in WW2. I will just be very brief here with a teaser - the proverbial “tip of the iceberg” - of some basic problems with the official story.

The math does not add up. There were far less than 6 million Jews in all of German occupied Europe at their height of power. Then 6 million Jews were gassed. After the war, several more millions of Jewish survivors received reparations. At Auschwitz the official numbers of murdered were reduced by nearly 3 million, and yet the 6 million number remains.

Swimming pool, theatre, orchestra, soccer, hospital, maternity ward — these things were all present at Auschwitz. Thousands of babies were born there. That does not sound like a Death Camp.

Eyewitness testimonies fell apart under the skillful cross examination by Attorney Douglas Christie at the 1985 Ernst Zündel trial in Toronto. For example, Arnold Friedman testified that he saw 14-foot flames coming out of the crematoria chimneys at Auschwitz, and that he could tell by the color of the smoke and flames whether they were fat Jewish Hungarians or skinny Jewish Poles who were being burned. In answering the question from Doug Christie about whether there could have been other explanations for the smoke and flames, Arnold Friedman testified in court: “Yes, there could have. If I had listened to you at the time when I was listening to other people (in the camp), I might have listened to you. But at the time, I listened to them.” He was a frightened boy at Auschwitz who had heard the wildest of rumors.

The crematoria existed as a means to dispose of the bodies of people who died of typhus or other causes. The fact of the matter is that the crematoria did not emit flames or smoke.

The number one expert on gas executions in the USA, Fred Leuchter, went to Poland and did forensic examination of the so-called gas chambers at Auschwitz and concluded in his “Leuchter Report” that not a single gas execution could have taken place there. Zyklon B residues would have been present in the walls and floor, and there simply were no chemical residues, other than in the clothing disinfectant chambers. Zyklon B is a pesticide which was indeed used to disinfect clothing, so as to kill lice. Lice carried the deadly disease typhus, and the goal was to keep the camp inmates healthy and alive.

Post-war confessions were extracted by torture - hence unreliable.

Not a single autopsy exists indicating death by gas poisoning in any of the concentration camps in all of German occupied territory during WW2.
